U. S. Unveils Atom Arms Freeze Plan at Geneva

GENEVA (AP)—The United States today unveiled details of its proposal for a freeze on the major powers' stocks of nuclear missiles and bombers.

In an effort to counter Soviet charges of espionage, U.S. Disarmament Delegate Adrian S. Fisher said no inventory or control of the total number of weapons held by each side would be required.

But Fisher said a rigorous control and inspection system would be set up to prevent a further buildup or improvement of stockpiles.

Fisher told the 17-nation disarmament conference the freeze was the "most significant and potentially far-reaching" of firearms control measures suggested by President Johnson on Jan. 21.

The freeze would affect:

1. Ground-based surface-to-surface missiles with a range of more than 1,000 kilometers (621 miles) together with their launching pads.

2. Strategic bombers weighing more than 25,000 kilograms (27.5 tons) together with their air-to-surface missiles with a range of more than 100 kilometers (62 miles).

3. Strategic antimissile systems together with their launching facilities.

Fisher said he was submitting details of the proposal on direct instruction from President Johnson.

Soviet Delegate Semyon K. Tsarapkin has repeatedly rejected the freeze proposal, claiming it would install a Western control system over Soviet armaments without producing any reduction of arms stockpiles.

Fisher said the freeze should be established under an American-Soviet treaty open for signature by other powers.

Production of new types of strategic planes or missiles would be banned. Planes or missiles could be replaced as they wore out on a one-for-one basis, ruling out any increase of stockpiles. Weapons replaced would be destroyed under international control.

Although there would be no verification of inventories, controls over launching sites "is an essential element of the program," Fisher said.

Limitations would be imposed on improvement of launching sites or construction of new ones. Testing of strategic planes and missiles also would be rigorously controlled. An agreed annual number of test and training flights would be permitted under international supervision.

First Commercial Shale Oil Production Slated at Rifle

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Three eastern-based oil firms said Wednesday they had formed a venture to develop commercial production of oil from shale land near Rifle in western Colorado.

President Charles E. Spahr of the Standard Oil Co. of Ohio said it would be the first such commercial production of shale oil in the United States. Joining with Standard Oil in the venture were the Oil Shale Corp. of New York and the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Co.

Standard has a 40 per cent interest. The other two firms each have 30 per cent in the program.

Spahr said the venture was formed when the Dow Chemical Co. granted options to the Sohio Petroleum Co. on about 7,500 acres of oil shale land in Colorado.

H. D. Doan, president of Dow, said the firm received "substantial" cash payments on the option. He said it also contemplated installation of large scale facilities for commercial production of oil from oil shale.

The property, located near Rifle, is on the upper reaches of Parachute Creek. The optioned property includes about 800 acres in an adjacent valley and 500 acres near the Colorado River.

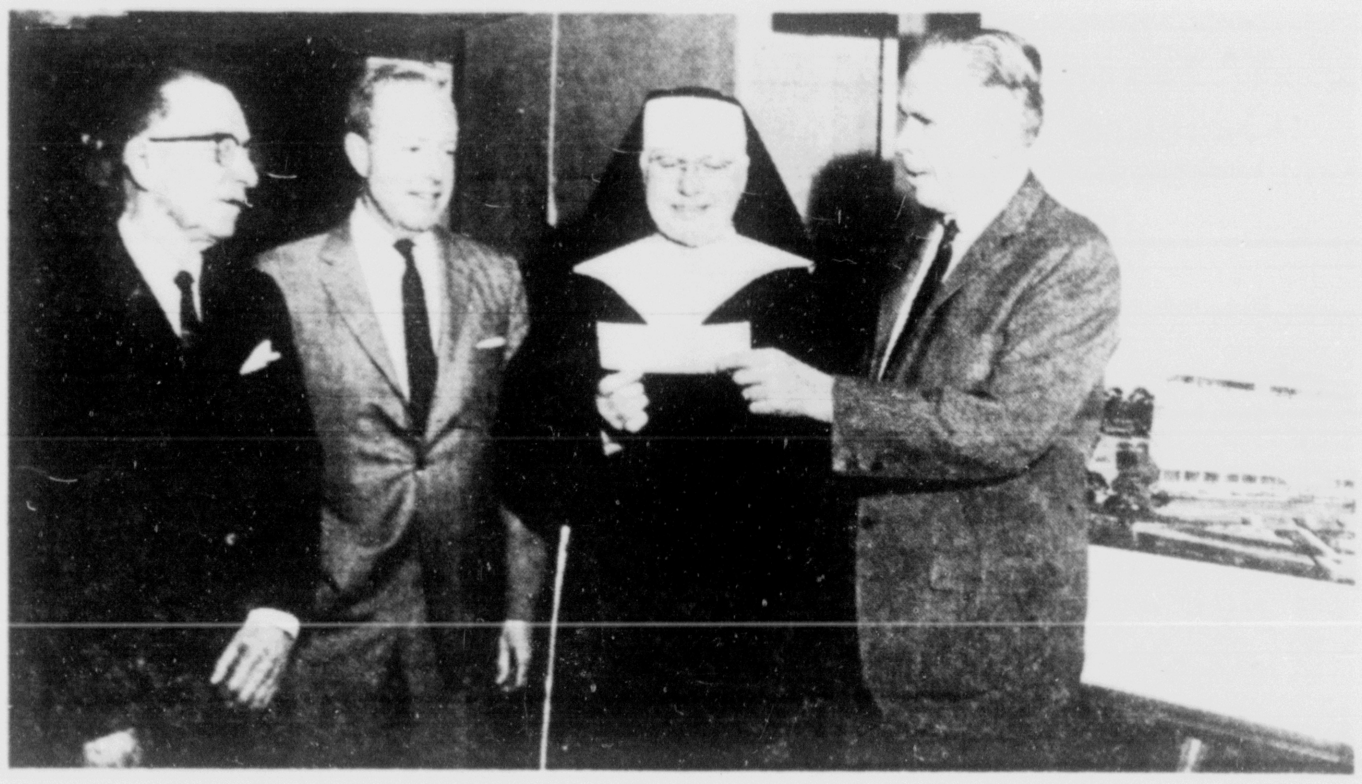
The Oil Shale Corp. owns patented processes for extracting oil from shale and has reserves in western Colorado.

Hypnotist Says Music Damages His Business

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One thing a hypnotist needs, said Dr. William J. Bryan Jr., is a quiet office.

He filed suit in Superior Court Wednesday, asking $55,000 in damages from his landlord.

He said the owners of the building on Sunset Boulevard made noisy alterations after he moved in, then rented space next door to a music publisher. The result: Plunking pianos kept his patient awake.



HOSPITAL FUND BOOSTED—The building fund of St. Francis Hospital was $25,000 richer today as the result of a contribution in that amount Wednesday by the Boettcher Foundation. Potato Addict Wants Them Non-Fattening

LONDON (AP) — Sir Winston Churchill's daughter Mary appealed today to Britain's potato marketing board to produce a nonfattening spud.

"I'm a lifelong devotee of the potato," she said. "I eat them every day. I'm an absolute addict."

Mary is Mrs. Christopher Soames, wife of the minister of agriculture. She spoke at the opening of the board's $840,000 experiment station.

"I would like to think you might find time to discover a potato which does not put pounds on one," said Mrs. Soames. "If you did, we'd eat four times as many potatoes as we do now."

Mrs. Soames, 41 and the mother of five, is pretty and trim. But her 43-year-old husband is the heavyweight of Prime Minister Alec Douglas-Home's Cabinet. Newsmen asked her his weight.

"I really don't know," she replied. "It's almost a Cabinet secret."

Conciliation Seen in Belgian Doctors' Strike

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Hopes of conciliation in the Belgian doctors' strike were raised today.

Social Affairs Minister Edmond Leburton told newsmen Wednesday night the government would consider suspension of the strike a goodwill gesture that could lead to negotiations.

Previously, Prime Minister Theo Lefevre had insisted that only the end of the strike could bring about discussions on changes in the health insurance system, the doctors' target.

The doctors also were conciliatory. A spokesman said they considered that the talks, which broke down early Sunday, were only suspended.

Rail Bargainers Spurred on by Short Deadline

By NEIL GILBRIDE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bargaining talks aimed at averting a nationwide railroad strike were spurred on today by President Johnson's implied shorter deadline for a voluntary settlement.

"We should know definitely not later than next Monday whether the parties to this dispute will settle it by the process of bargaining and by responsible reason," Johnson said Wednesday.

"The country expects that answer to be yes," Johnson said after conferring privately with federal mediators and negotiators for five unions and nearly 200 railroads.

Johnson did not say what he might do if the talks fail, but he would have no power to halt a scheduled strike April 25 unless he asked Congress for special legislation.

The five-year dispute over wages, job classifications and working conditions had exhausted all provisions of federal law when Johnson won a 15-day strike postponement last Friday and set up the emergency bargaining talks.

"There is no settlement yet," Johnson said Wednesday on the sixth day of the talks, "and there can be no settlement until all issues are disposed of."

His reference to a definite decision by Monday was the first official indication that he will not let the entire 15-day postponement elapse without considering other steps.

"So far, there's been no threat of legislation," said George Reedy, White House press secretary.

"The principal question," Johnson said, "is whether these bargainers can, in 15 days, get over four years of the idea of somebody else settling their disagreements for them. I hope they can. I think they can."

He asked for another "definitive" report on the talks by this weekend.

The five train operating unions represent about 200,000 employes. They are protesting proposed railroad work rules changes which they contend would amount to substantial pay cuts for many workers and eliminate many jobs.

TRANSFER MADE

DENVER (UPI)— State officials said Wednesday that all bids and contracts on state capital construction would be handled by the State Planning Department rather than the state purchasing office. The new system took effect Tuesday with the opening of bids for a National Guard armory at Lamar. In the past, many state institutions were responsible for their own construction programs with assistance from the Planning Division.

Cuba Sentences American to 30 Years in Prison

HAVANA (UPI) — Frank C. Emmick, retired American businessman of Rossford, Ohio, was sentenced Wednesday by a Cuban court to 30 years imprisonment on charges of being a spy for the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency.

Three of the six Cubans who stood trial with him last Thursday received identical sentences. They were Manuel Sanjuro Diaz, 26, Guillermo Diaz Alvarez, 52, and Juan Antonio Fernandez, 59.

The three remaining Cubans, Rafael Alvarez Fernandez, 27, German Ruiz Martinez, 40 and David Feito Fernandez, 27, received prison terms of 20, 12 and six years, respectively.

Undertaker Can't Be Jolly, Funeral Director Sighs

NEW YORK (AP) — Socially, the lot of an undertaker is a hard one, says a funeral director.

Frank E. Fairchild Jr. told fellow Rotarians in Brooklyn every-day jibes undertakers have to endure.

For instance, he said, they often are greeted by "Hiya, digger."

Not only that, he said, but "you can never call on a sick friend because he realizes what you stand for."

"You can never brag about a sale," he added.

Contrary to popular opinion, Fairchild said, "A good funeral director does not get hardened to death or bereavement."

Youths Flee From Cuba's Work Draft

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—One of 28 youths fleeing Cuba to evade the military draft, which also serves as a labor pool, says "there is panic among young men" because of it.

The exile, Angel Robaina, 18, said Wednesday he had escaped from a stadium in Oriente Province where 900 draft youths were concentrated.

"I got away during confusion in the stadium and hid for 15 days," Robaina said. "Then I contacted a group that was escaping the island by boat."

Robaina was one of 48 refugees arriving in three boats Wednesday.

Last weekend 28 other youths who didn't want to be drafted arrived by boat.

The Castro government has said draftees will be used to harvest sugar cane and other crops.

Methodists See Difficulties in Church Mergers

By ROBERT A. DUBILL

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Protestant church leaders sifted through a strongly worded Methodist statement today for clues to the future of a movement to unite six major churches embracing 21 million members.

A methodist commission attending the third annual Consultation on Christian Union issued a statement Wednesday saying there were many theological and social questions that would take a long time to resolve.

"Although one must never overlook the possibility of the intervention of the Holy Spirit to bring men to a common mind," the statement said, "it is difficult at this time to judge that a plan of union of the churches is feasible during the coming quadrennium (a four-year period)."

The statement emphasized, however, that this must not be construed as closing the door to ultimate unity. A spokesman said the statement was drafted some time ago, but essentially still holds.

Methodist Bishop Glenn Phillips of Denver, Colo., had said Tuesday that union of the six denominations may take as long as 20 or 30 years to be realized.

In a companion development, a spokesman for the Protestant Episcopal Church said he did not expect his church's governing body to initiate a general plan of union when it meets later this year.

The Methodists and Episcopalians have been meeting intermittently for three years with delegates of the United Presbyterian Church, United Church of Christ and the Disciples of Christ and Evangelical United Brethren Churches.

Spokesmen for the other denominations did not comment immediately on the Methodist statement.

Contractors Try Again to Settle Roofers Strike

Contractors submitted another set of proposals to representatives of Roofers Local No. 41 Wednesday in an attempt to settle the two-week-old strike which has affected four states.

Topping declined to reveal the nature of the proposal, indicat-

Springs Lawns May Face Another Dry Summer

Customers of the Colorado Springs Water Department are facing another long, dry summer if present conditions remain unchanged.

City water storage is only 39.8 per cent of capacity, City Water Superintendent Jack A. McCullough said. He said this represents 4.1 billion gallons of water in storage as of April 1.

Despite the fact that the snow cover on Pikes Peak is near normal, storage in the mountain reservoirs decreased about 135,000,000 gallons in March, McCullough said.

City reservoirs were 43.6 per cent of capacity a year ago at this time of year, half full in 1962, 56.6 per cent in 1960 and 55.8 per cent in 1959.

McCullough reminded again that long-standing watering restrictions for customers of the Colorado Springs Department of Public Utilities are still in effect "and will remain in effect until precipitation conditions dictate otherwise."

In addition to some spring rains, some good and wet snows on the watershed areas are needed in the next few weeks to make material improvements to storage conditions.

He also reminded that no exceptions to the restrictions can be made for those who wish to put in new lawns.

Restrictions now in force permit persons living in odd-numbered houses to irrigate on odd-numbered days of the months and those in even numbered houses on even numbered days of the month. No one is allowed to irrigate on the 31st day of any month.

Also, any non-domestic use of water, including car washing, is restricted to the days allotted users.

No predictions can be made by utilities officials as of now "as to what course watering restrictions may take as the spring and summer progresses."

Total consumption of water during March, McCullough said, was 432,123,000 gallons, which represented a daily average of 13.9 million gallons.

The city diverted about 186 million gallons of Blue River water from Montgomery Dam last month. The dam northwest of Alma was only 16 per cent full April 1.

Land Slipped; Alaskan Coastal Towns Face Tide

By JOE RIGERT

SELDOVIA, Alaska (AP) — Even in the drifting snow they came—down to the boardwalk to watch the tides.

Jack English, 61, the town judge was there. So were Chuck Hendrix, the mayor and the owner of H. S. Young Mercantile, Charles Knight.

Tide watching is deadly serious business in this isolated little fishing community nestled against the green hills of the Kenai Peninsula in southcentral Alaska.

The tides jeopardize the town's entire business district—its five seafood plants, the two grocery stores, the four hotels, the restaurants, bars, the movie house and all the other shops—30 in all. Valued at more than $15 million, they set on two miles of vulnerable boardwalk.

For three days this week Seldovians watched anxiously as the tide crept into their city. Ten buildings were flooded, but damage was minor. Wednesday the tides were receding.

But the danger is not over. May's tides will be higher and there is always the fear of a storm.

"If the winds come, God help us," says one resident.

At one time Seldovia stood safely on her stilts. Even at high tide when more than 20 feet of water moved in, there was room to spare under the boardwalk.

Then came the Alaskan earthquake. Geologists say it tilted the land masses of southcentral Alaska, leaving sunken coastal areas at the mercy of the tides. The land may slip back at least partly to normal, say the scientists, but it's impossible to tell and may take months or years to find out.

There is talk of raising the whole business district, but a reluctance to go that far until it's known what lies ahead. The cost could be prohibitive—maybe $2.5 million.

New Flurry of Shooting Disturbs Cyprus Capital

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Another flurry of shooting broke out today between Greek and Turkish Cypriots in Nicosia.

A U.N. military spokesman said about 40 shots were exchanged in the vicinity of Irish Bridge, near the British high commission building on the border separating the rival communities. No casualties were reported.

A brief exchange of fire also was reported between the Greek village of Petra and the Turkish village of Elea in western Cyprus. Sweden's U.N. contingent took over that area Wednesday from British troops.

The U.N. spokesman said a Turkish Cypriot was wounded Wednesday night in a Kyrenia Mountain battle which now is in its sixth day. The shooting was described as the heaviest since warfare started in the craggy peaks overlooking both the Mediterranean and the Nicosia plain.

Minor Changes Only Seen in U.S. Weather

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The nation's weather pattern showed only minor changes today with fair and dry weather in most areas.

There were a few wet spots and a cold front headed into northern Montana. Colder weather, with rain or snow and brisk northerly winds, was indicated. Warnings to stockmen were issued in the northern Rockies and northern parts of the Great Basin.

Showers sprinkled scattered areas along the southeast coast of Florida, the northern Pacific coastal region and parts of northern Illinois. Heavy fog shrouded sections of eastern New England, with drizzle in some areas.

Temperatures ranged from the low 30s along the northern border of Montana and the mid-30s in northern Maine to the 70s in southern Florida, the Lower Rio Grande Valley and the southwest Desert region. The mercury hit 100 in Blythe, Calif. Wednesday and night time readings were in the 80s. It was 95 again Wednesday in Los Angeles.

Escapee, Who Stabbed Wife, Gives Self Up

A 29-year old escapee from the Ft. Lyons Veterans Hospital who was reported to have stabbed his estranged wife several times in the head and chest early Wednesday morning has surrendered to law enforcement authorities.

Eliseo Antonio Chavez turned himself in to the sheriff's office Wednesday night and was then turned over to the police department, according to a sheriff's office report. Chavez was placed in City Jail.

His wife, Martha Chavez, 29, of 317 E. Vermijo St., was reported to be in "satisfactory" condition this morning at St. Francis Hospital.

Mrs. Chavez and a baby sitter told police Wednesday that Chavez had stabbed his wife at her home when she refused to take him back. She was taken to the hospital in critical condition after suffering several severe stab wounds in the chest and head.

Chavez was booked for investigation of assault with a deadly weapon.

Red Summit Talk Develops Around Nikita's Birthday

By HENRY S. BRADSHER

MOSCOW (AP)—An informal summit meeting of the Soviet bloc is developing around Premier Khrushchev's 70th birthday Friday.

The inevitable topic of conversation is expected to be the feud between the Soviet Union and Red China with its overtones of personal clash between the two nations' septuagenarian leaders.

Mao Tze-tung, whom the Soviet premier criticized personally for the first time in a caustic speech Wednesday, was 70 in December.

Communist leaders of Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Hungary, Mongolia and Poland are gathering for Khrushchev's birthday.

Aside from press references to visitors' arrivals, there was no public indication of celebrations. The diplomatic corps was officially informed it was not expected to turn out for any functions.

This is in marked contrast to Stalin's 70th birthday in 1949. Praise of the late leader went on for months. Khrushchev, who has denounced Stalin's cult of personality, was reported by East European Communists to have firmly rejected anything

Chaotic and illogical are the words for the continuing warfare between this island's Greek and Turkish communities.

Newcomer Firm May Become Loan Company

Fred M. Betz, trustee for the Joe Newcomer Finance Co., said Wednesday that he is hoping for a favorable decision concerning his request that the firm be reorganized as a small loan company.

The request will be heard in U.S. District Court in Denver on Friday, April 24, at 11 a.m. Judge William E. Doyle will preside.

Hearing of the petition has been delayed to give the Securities and Exchange Commission time to study the request and furnish the judge with an advisory opinion.

Betz said Wednesday that the April 24 hearing "should be a decisive action in the whole operation."

On March 3, Betz asked the U.S. District Court to replace the insolvent Joe Newcomer Finance Co. with a small loan firm to be known as the Columbine Finance Co.

Betz at that time suggested to the court that general creditors, such as suppliers and utilities, be paid at the rate of 10 cents for each $1 indebtedness.

The defunct company and its subsidiaries owe more than $3 million to about 2,500 persons, most of them in Colorado Springs, Betz reported on March 3.

The firm's assets total about $578,000.

A temporary restraining order was filed against the Newcomer firm after a complaint was filed in Federal District Court in behalf of the SEC. The complaint charged that the finance company and its officers, Joe W. Newcomer, Ruth L. Piland and Royce Hill, all of Colorado Springs had violated the Anti-Fraud Provisions of the Securities Act of 1933, and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, and the Registration Provisions of the Securities Act of 1933 in offering and selling promissory and debenture notes.

Newcomer subsequently denied the charges.

Nationalist Chief Restricted in South Rhodesia

SALISBURY, Southern Rhodesia (AP) — Southern Rhodesia's new government put African Nationalist leader Joshua Nkomo and three of his chief supporters under restrictive custody today.

The three men and a woman were ordered confined for 12 months to 100 acres in the Gona-Re-Zhou Game Reserve, on the frontier with Portuguese Mozambique.

Justice Minister Clifford Dupont said police, in a dawn swoop in southeastern Nuanetsi district, arrested Nkomo, Josiah Chinamano, his wife, Ruth, and Joseph Msika.

Chinamano is Nkomo's chief lieutenant in the Nationalist Peoples' Caretaker Council and Msika is the party's foreign affairs official.

The crackdown followed the resignation Monday of Prime Minister Winston Field, whose all-white, conservative Rhodesian Front party had decided he was too moderate in dealing with the self-governing British territory's African majority.

Field was succeeded by Treasury Minister Ian Smith, who favors stronger measures against African nationalists. The Rhodesian Front is pledged to maintain the white minority's rule in Southern Rhodesia and wants independence before the British government can give the Africans control.

A government statement said Nkomo had ignored repeated warnings to refrain from dragging the country from crisis to crisis.

Science for You

By BOB BROWN

PROBLEM: Two Mirror Tricks.

NEEDED: Two mirrors, some cellophane tape, and a short pencil.

DO THIS: Tape the mirrors together at right angles to each other, stand them up, and place the pencil between them. How many pencils do you see?

Look into the mirrors, and you will see your face, but not as in an ordinary mirror.

HERE'S WHY: Light leaving the pencil goes in all directions. Some passes directly to the eye, some passes to a mirror then to the eye, and some may be reflected from both mirrors before reaching the eye.

The face is reflected from both mirrors before reaching the eye. This gives an effect opposite to that from a single mirror. A finger touching the left side of the face seems to touch the left side of the mirrored face.

A collection of the "Science For You" experiments is in book form and sold in better bookstores. It is called Science Circus.

'Heart Periscope' Will Aid Science of Surgery

CHICAGO (AP) — A surgeon showed scenes from thrilling movies taken inside the living heart with a new internal periscope today.

The periscope is thrust down a blood vessel into dogs' hearts. There it lights up the interior of the heart, and walls, to take movies. A heart specialist then can look through the tube to see what is going on and decide whether surgery is needed to make heart repairs.

An improved, flexible, instrument now is being built, said Walter J. Gamble of Children's Hospital in Boston.

If it proves safe in animal tests, it will be used to inspect the interior of human hearts.

Dr. Gamble and Robert E. Innis of the American Optical Co., Southbridge, Mass., described the new instrument to the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

Just as a periscope allows the captain of a submarine to see the sky above him, the internal periscope can probe into a body organ without surgery.

Dr. Gamble has taken slow motion movies of the aortic valve, which opens and closes as the heart pumps blood out into the body. And he has movies of the inside of the right upper chamber of the dog heart, the right and left lower chambers, and the valve between the upper and lower chambers on the right side.

Thousands of children are born with heart defects. The heart periscope inspection could show surgeons what had to be done before they operate.

Dr. Gamble said he had once had a peek at the aorta. In adults, inspection of that great artery might show whether it was affected by the "rust" that underlies heart attacks.

The periscope into dogs' hearts is only about half the roundness of a cigarette and 21 inches long. Through incisions in the neck of anesthesized dogs, it has been pushed gently down through blood vessels into the heart.

When it is in place, a small balloon at the tip of the instrument is inflated with air so it presses against the part of the heart to be inspected.

Light from a high intensity bulb outside the body races down through glass fibers to illuminate the scene. The interior light is reflected back to a lense system.

This light hits the end points of 76,000 ultra tiny glass fibers in the interior channel of the tube. Each point then conducts a tiny part of the total image up the tube. All together, the 76,000 dots of light recreate the image of what is being seen. This end of the tube outside the body is viewed through a magnifying lense by the human eye or movie camera.

Another Revolt Try Smashed in Syria

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP)—Army troops have smashed the third antigovernment revolt since Syria's Baath Socialist regime came to power in a military coup 13 months ago.

A government spokesman said an uprising in Hamah, 130 miles north of Damascus, was put down Wednesday with two persons killed. The city of 100,000 was still under a 24-hour curfew today, but bakeries and groceries were ordered to reopen, and easing of the restriction was expected.

The revolt started as a student demonstration protesting the political arrest of a high school student. The government said a strike developed and was exploited by "reactionary and feudalist elements, who had been infuriated by the government's seizure of their extra land under the agrarian reform law."

More than 30 persons were reported under arrest, and the government set up a five-man military court to try them.

Tighter Curbs On News in Courts Sought

By STERLING F. GREEN

WASHINGTON (AP)—The nation's editors were told today there is "cause for great concern" in the rising clamor in legal circles for tighter curbs on news reporting of the courts.

The Committee on Freedom of Information of the American Society of Newspaper Editors warned that the proposed restrictions, "although aimed primarily at television," could damage all news coverage.

The committee headed by Creed C. Black, executive editor of the Wilmington (Del.) Morning News and Evening Journal, prepared the report for today's opening session of ASNE's three-day annual convention.

The nearly 500 editors registered for the meeting were invited as guests at President Johnson's late afternoon news conference in the large State Department auditorium.

The day's convention schedule also included a luncheon address by Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg and an afternoon panel on civil rights headed by Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy.

The freedom of information report attributed the restrictive proposals by legal groups partly to the "tragic and turbulent events at Dallas"—the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, the televised murder of Lee Harvey Oswald and the hectic trial that convicted Jack Ruby as Oswald's murderer.

"Of more lasting concern to us is a broader—and relatively new—element in this perennial controversy which deserves no less attention from us than it is getting from the bench and bar," Creed's committee said.

"That is the extent to which television is complicating matters for all media."

The committee noted that the New York County Lawyers' Association has declared that the "special visual impact" of television makes new measures necessary to protect the right of accused persons to a fair trial. The lawyers said they were convinced that "any reliance on voluntary restraints by the television industry are largely doomed to failure."

The emphasis on television "is not to suggest that the newspapers of America are blameless," the editors' report went on.

It said:

"Indeed, the necessity to reexamine our own shortcomings and rid our own house of irresponsibility becomes all the more urgent if we are to head off measures which—although aimed primarily at television—could affect us all and invite greater abuses in the administration of justice than those they supposedly are designed to correct.

"If developing smaller television cameras is beyond our control, we can certainly try, by our own example, to teach the electronic newsmen larger manners and a deeper understanding of the basic truth that freedom of inforoation is not an unlimited license to trample on individual rights."

Greek King Announces He Will Marry in Fall

ATHENS, Greece (AP)—King Constantine announced today that he will marry Princess Anne-Marie of Denmark on Sept. 18.

The 23-year-old monarch, who succeeded to the throne March 6 on the death of his father, King Paul, told a news conference the wedding would take place in Athens. It will follow a six-month mourning period for Paul.

Anne-Marie will be 18 on Aug. 30.

Constantine and the Danish princess have been engaged since January 1963 and before his father's death planned to marry next January. But with his accession to the throne and because of his youth, court circles felt a royal wedding would strengthen his position.

Republicans Say Lodge Must Start Campaign Himself

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Influential Republicans of all shades of opinion believe primary victories will not be enough and Henry Cabot Lodge must campaign personally if he wants to try to win the GOP presidential nomination.

A cross-section survey of party members who will have a voice in the choice of a nominee disclosed nearly unanimous opinion that the current boom for Lodge will flatten out if he remains as U.S. Ambassador to South Viet Nam until convention time.

Lodge has said he isn't a candidate for the nomination and can't participate in politics while he serves as ambassador. President Johnson said last week that Lodge is playing a "very constructive role" in Viet Nam and is under no pressure to resign.

Irving Salomon, a close adviser, reported after talking to the ambassador on a recent Far Eastern trip he can't say whether Lodge will resign by June, "but he cannot ethically be an ambassador and be involved in politics."

Lodge's current front-running status in national polls and his prospect of topping other candidates in the May 15 Oregon primary are attributed to various factors. One often mentioned is that of voter dissatisfaction with other presidential aspirants.

The surge for Lodge also is credited to his experience in the foreign affairs field, his remembered television image as a tough opponent of communism as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations and his lack of involvement in current GOP bickering over conservative and moderate views.

Listed Lodge liabilities include his tie to President Johnson's policies in Viet Nam, his defeats for the Senate in 1952 and for vice president in 1960 and what many thought was his lackadaisical campaigning in 1960.

Strategists for Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller regard it as inconceivable that Lodge could win the nomination from Saigon. They believe his popularity would nose dive if he came home and subjected himself to questioning on the issues of the day.

Rep. Melvin R. Laird, R-Wis., named to head the platform committee for the July convention in San Francisco, said he thinks Lodge will have to come home by May 15 if he expects to be the nominee.

"Anyone who discounts Lodge's chances of getting the nomination isn't assessing the situation carefully," said Laird, who isn't committed to any candidate. "There is a well-organized drive for him but if he isn't home by May 15 it could collapse quickly."

Laird said he thinks avowed contenders for the nomination have suffered from over-exposure in the long primary campaigning that stretches from January to June, and voters may be turing of them.

A former Republican national chairman who didn't want to be quoted by name, summed up Lodge's appeal this way: "This is the guy who is least undesirable to the voters at this point. They are disenchanted with everybody else."

But he added: "Lodge is not another Eisenhower. He is going to have to come home and answer questions on where he stands if he expects to get the nomination. He's also going to have to show he can take the pace of vigorous presidential campaigning."

Another former GOP chairman, who didn't want to be quoted by name, likened the Lodge surge to the Willkie boom in 1940. He said his travels indicate that Lodge has strong support among women voters, generated by his television appearances at the United Nations.

"But when he comes home—and he'll have to in my judgment if he expects to be the nominee — we'll have to see whether this image stands up," the former chairman said.

Sen. George D. Aiken, R-Vt., a Republican liberal spokesman who remains uncommitted to any presidential candidate, said he is skeptical that Lodge can win the nomination.

"He is tied in tightly with the Johnson administration policies in Viet Nam and some Republicans are critical of those policies," Aiken said.

On the other hand, Aiken said Lodge, 62, "looks young" and seems to have an appeal to younger voters. He said there was a question in his mind whether Lodge could remain in Saigon and get the nomination.

Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, R-Maine, an announced presidential candidate, held that if Lodge wins in Oregon, where her name also is entered, he might look like a winner even to the pros.

Mrs. Smith felt that Lodge had attained some of the political glamour that surrounded Eisenhower in 1952. But she held that just as Eisenhower had returned to meet delegates before the 1952 convention opened, Lodge would have to return.

A spokesman for Rockefeller, who asked not to be named publicly, said Lodge had made "unheard of gains" in the polls and he doubted that any such popularity could be maintained until the July convention.

The Rockefeller strategist said he thinks the tragic death of President John F. Kennedy had left voters in a state of shock from which they have not fully recovered.

"They're just not getting excited about anybody at this point," he said.

Rehearing of Closing Law Being Requested

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI) — A motion asking for a rehearing on Kansas' Sunday closing law case was on file today in the state Supreme Court.

The motion is a routine one asking the high court to reconsider its decision in the controversial case. No action was taken when the motion was filed Tuesday, but the court was expected to deny the motion.

Last month the Supreme Court upheld a Sedgwick County district court decision that held the 1963 closing law was invalid and unconstitutional.

Leopold Sues For Invasion Of Privacy

CHICAGO (AP)—Nathan Leopold, convicted with Richard Loeb of the 1924 murder of schoolboy Bobby Franks, has been allowed invasion of privacy damages for advertising in connection with the fictional book and movie portrayal of his life.

Circuit Court Judge Thomas Kluczynski Wednesday ordered Leopold's attorneys to request a hearing for damages on a $1,406,000 suit filed in 1959 against Meyer Levin and 56 others. Levin is the author of "Compulsion," the portrayal upon which the suit is based.

Leopold, 59, was paroled in 1958 after serving 32 years in Stateville Prison for the murder of Franks, 14. Leopold was released from parole last year and is now an instructor at the University of Puerto Rico.

The damage suit named as plaintiffs, besides Levin, Simon and Shuster, Inc., New York, a publishing house, Twentieth Century Fox, Inc., Pocket Books, Inc., New York, Hollywood producer Darryl F. Zanuck and 48 Chicago area movie theaters.

The book and movie "Compulsion" identified Leopold in the public mind as the chief character, Judd Steiner, the suit charged, and unjustly appropriated for profit Leopold's name, likeness and personality.

Shortage of Zinc Noted At Denver Mint Plant

WASHINGTON (AP)—A shortage of zinc almost forced a recent shutdown of penny-making operations at the Denver mint, a House Interior subcommittee was told today.

Anthony A. Bertsch, assistant administrator for industrial mobilization in the Commerce Department, said he managed to obtain 50 tons of high grade zinc for the mint on less than a week's notice. A small proportion of zinc goes into the pennies, which are largely copper.

Bertsch told the subcommittee he was advised by the Bureau of the Mint of the shortage only four to five days before the Denver mint would have had to curtail operations.

He said the metal was shipped from St. Louis by a private supplier.

Chairman Wayne Aspinall, D-Colo., of the full Interior Committee, said he would ask mint officials to explain the delay in ordering the metal.

Bertsch gave no date for the incident but said it had nothing to do with the government's decision to release 75,000 tons of zinc from the strategic stockpile.

This release from the stockpile also prompted criticism from Aspinall who said government action has handicapped domestic zinc operations and "now when we might have a little bit of sunshine for zinc producers we find out that the stockpile is to supply the metal.

Quick Tax Trial To Be Sought For Stratton

CHICAGO (AP)—Government prosecutors say they will press for an early trial of William G. Stratton, former Republican governor of Illinois, who was indicted Wednesday on charges of evading payment of $46,676 in income taxes.

Edward Hanrahan, U.S. district attorney, said no date has been set for the trial of Stratton, 50, who was defeated in 1960 for a third term as governor.

Republican spokesmen called the indictment a personal matter, with no relation to the Republican party.

A federal grand jury charged that Stratton evaded payment of $46,676 in taxes on $93,595 income amassed during 1957-1960, Stratton's second and last term in office.

Stratton, in a statement, denied any wrongdoing.

Government sources refused to say what the unreported sources of income were, but they said this might be revealed during the trial. His salary as governor was $25,000 a year.

Hanrahan announced the indictment the morning after Illinois' primary election, saying it had been kept secret to insure an orderly election.

"There may be some technical differences between my counsel and the Internal Revenue agents," Stratton said in a statement, "but with respect to the charge that is made against me in the indictment, I do not believe I have done anything wrong whatsoever."

Stratton was defeated in 1960 by Democratic Gov. Otto Kerner, who was unopposed for renomination in Tuesday's primary. Stratton has not been active in politics since his defeat.

NEW YORK (AP)—Sidewalk comments of a Pavement Plato:

Do you knock on wood three times to avoid bad luck?

Do you carry a silver dollar or some other object in your pocket to bring good luck?

If your answer in both cases is no, then you aren't a believer in the two most common American superstitions. But that by no means is proof you aren't superstitious.

Many people go through life without becoming religious, at least to the extent of adhering to a formal creed, but hardly any of us escape becoming devotees, consciously or unconsciously, of some of the thousands of superstitions that exist in the world.

Since the universe is large and man is small, he has sought since the dawn of his time to find some way of being less uneasy and feeling more comfortable and secure in that universe. Superstition was his first answer—the taking of some step that would either get the dark forces of destiny of his side, or at least keep their anger from destroying him.

"If you can't be for me, please don't be against me," cried ancient man—and knocked three times on a tree to placate the spirits he felt dwelt therein.

Today we still knock on wood three times at moments of possible peril, and we do it mockingly as if we were joking. But the main thing is—we still do it.

Childhood chants are full of superstition. Can't you recall skipping along the pavement as a youngster and saying "Step on a crack, and break your grandmother's back"? And when you did step on a crack, weren't you half - afraid that you have brought bodily disaster to that dear old lady?

As we grow older many of us make up fresh superstitions of our own out of the rituals of living we acquire along the way.

I know of one man who is sure everything will go wrong the rest of the day if he nicks his face while shaving. I know another who has similar premonitions of bad luck if he turns off the alarm clock with his left rather than his right hand.

Man may someday take the superstition out of science; science will probably never quite take the superstition out of man.

The nations two newest states, Alaska and Hawaii, prohibit the death penalty for crimes.

Farmers Union Man Blasts Federation

DENVER (AP) — A National Farmers Union official said today "if the American Farm Bureau Federation had its way, millions of Americans would be condemned to poverty."

The charge was made by Reuben L. Johnson, NFU director of legislative services. He said the Farm Bureau is trying to "turn consumers against farmers over the vital wheat-cotton bill."

This drew from Lowell Rodgers, information director for the Colorado Farm Bureau, the comment, "we're not going to stoop to Farmers Union's tactics in making a reply."

"It's strange to me that Farmers Union has so much time to degrade someone else's program," Rodgers said. "Farmers spoke overwhelmingly for our program when they voted down the wheat support program last year."

Minor Ailments Suffer Worst In Doctors' Strike

By PHILIPPE NEURAY

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP)—The seriously ill have been getting adequate treatment or better since the 15-day-old doctors' strike began, but those with minor ailments have to shift for themselves.

With most of Belgium's 10,000 doctors on strike against a new medical insurance law, there was general apprehension that many patients would die unattended.

Urgent cases on the whole have been taken care of under an emergency set-up organized by the physicians and taken over three days ago by the government.

Premier Theo Lefevre's government issued a decree Sunday calling for mobilization of 3,600 army reserve doctors, and requisitioning civilian doctors attached to hospitals. It says it has mobilized about 5,700 physicians.

The situation in many parts of Belgium, however, is reaching a critical point, with hospitals overcrowded and the danger of epidemics increasing.

Strike leaders claim their emergency setup is collapsing since the government took it over. The Interior Ministry blames the strikers, accusing them of sabotage.

During the 12 days the doctors ran the emergency service, with 2,000 physicians on day and night duty, there were no reports of danger to health.

For the poorer Belgians who were emergency cases, medicine and treatment were free.

There have been cases of hardship, especially for patients who wanted to be treated at home.

Hospital wards are overcrowded and patients are sent home as quickly as possible. Personal nursing attention is becoming nonexistent.

Although 3,600 military reserve doctors have been called to active duty this does not seem to help. Many come on foot without their medical instruments.

There was talk of nurses joining the strike. But one head nurse laughed: "We have too much work to go on strike."

Since the government ordered private clinics reopened Sunday, any patient can attend them free—for the time being.

Some low-income patients find themselves in $24-a-day suites in fashionable clinics.

Following strict military regulations, some doctors are sending patients to the hospital with the slightest fever.

Military hospitals have been opened to civilians but they are reaching the saturation point. Emergency hospitals have been set up in schools and other public buildings.

The army said it has field hospitals available in case of real emergency.

With Belgium's 2,000 dentists also on strike, a toothache victim must go to the hospital and wait.

Patients with minor troubles often go from one hospital to another in search of a bed.

The situation is softened by many arrangements between doctors and patients. Some physicians discreetly call at their patients' homes or drop a word in their letter box, telling them to go to a certain hospital where they will see them.

Meat Import Probe Slated in Colorado

DENVER (AP)—An investigation into meat imports into Colorado will be undertaken by several state agencies.

Plans for it were made at a meeting of state officials and livestock representatives at a closed-door meeting. The investigation will study:

—The pattern of imports into Colorado, where the meat comes from and where it goes.

—How much foreign meat is being sent to Colorado.

—How imported meat is used once it reaches the state.

The investigation will be under the direction of the State Health Department, said Howard Propst, administrative aide to Gov. John Love.

The department reported in February that a state law requiring labeling of imported meats and meat products was virtually unenforceable.

The governor has estimated that importation of meats resulted in losses of $50 million in marketings for Colorado stockmen.

Rhubarb, or pieplant, was used in China for medicinal purposes as early as 2700 B.C., according to National Geographic.

NEW YORK (AP)—Following is a complete list of stock transactions today on the New York Stock Exchange with 1:30 p.m. prices.

Wall Street Report

NEW YORK (AP) — Airlines and cigarette issues took losses in a mixed stock market early this afternoon. Trading was fairly active.

Gains and losses of fractions to about a point peppered the list of key stocks.

The outstanding feature was a 5-point spurt by Texas Gulf Sulphur which was bought very heavily on the company's announcement that it had made a major discovery of zinc, copper and silver in the Timmins, Ont., area.

Airlines were still soft. The cigarette stocks continued profit taking.

Small gains among selected oils, rails, building materials, utilities, motors and drugs tended to keep the list on balance.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up .3 at 305.5 with industrials up .7, rails up .1 and utilities up .2.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was up .22 at 825.65.

The picture was spotty among other metal producers. Phelps Dodge fell more than a point. Anaconda and Kennecott lost fractions. American Smelting was up slightly.

Reynolds Tobacco, a big gainer in recent weeks, lost more than a point.

American Telephone was up a fraction.

Prices were mixed on the American Stock Exchange.

Corporate bonds were mixed. U.S. government bonds were mostly unchanged.

Ike May Attempt To Stop Barry In Vote Drive

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Uncommitted party leaders appear to be banking on Dwight D. Eisenhower to touch off stop-Goldwater efforts at the Republican presidential nominating convention.

The former president publicly has remained aloof from the maneuvering in the preconvention period in which Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., has forged well ahead in the contest for convention votes.

Eisenhower has endorsed practically everybody who has been mentioned prominently for the nomination, and some who haven't. His blanket blessing has covered Goldwater as well as his opponents.

But party pros who haven't committed themselves to support of any individual candidate have formed the strong impression that Eisenhower will abandon his stated neutrality if he fears Goldwater otherwise might win the nomination and pocket the party organization for the next four years.

Eisenhower has provided plenty of evidence he believes the Republicans can win only if they present a moderately progressive program. He clearly fears that a conservative stance would bring defeat in November and a party split in the years ahead.

If the Republicans who want to stop Goldwater could agree among themselves on a candidate, they would be content for Eisenhower to fill at the convention his contractural role as a television commentator and ask nothing more of him.

With less than three months remaining before the convention opens, the uncommitted pros generally agree the field of potential Goldwater challengers has narrowed to Henry Cabot Lodge, ambassador to Viet Nam, former Vice President M. Nixon and Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania.

There is some skepticism about how long the popularity being shown in the polls by Lodge will last.

Nixon, the 1960 GOP presidential nominee, has no political base, having moved from California to New Hork. He may turn up with only a handful, if any, convention votes.

Scranton will be Pennsylvania's favorite son. But the feeling is that he has put handcuffs on any real pre-convention drive to move him into contention.

Given circumstances of this sort, the pros think that delegations and individuals will be coming around to discuss the situation with Eisenhower to learn what he thinks.

A signal from the former president that he preferred any one of these three men would start a convention bonfire. If he chose someone else, it would be more difficult to get the flames going but still this might be accomplished.

Grain Market

CHICAGO (AP)—Heavy selling drove May wheat sharply lower at times today in futures transactions on the board of Trade.

In the early afternoon, the delivery was down about five cents a bushel withpprofit cashing showing no sign of a letup.

The feed grains held small gains most of the day but soybeans were mixed and rye weak.

Carlot receipts today were estimated at: wheat no cars, corn 84, oats none, rye none, barley 6, soybeans 2.

Today in Washington

WASHINGTON (AP)—In the news from Washington:

ANILINE: One of the most controversial civil law suits growing out of World War II appears to be near its end.

U.S. District Judge David A. Pine Wednesday lifted an injunction he imposed last year and cleared the way for the Justice Department to sell General Aniline & Film Corp.

The Justice Department said the court order removed the last legal obstacle to divesting the American government of control over the multimillion dollar chemical firm.

General Aniline, with headquarters in New York, was seized as German property by the government in 1942.

Interhandel, a Swiss holding company, has argued it owned 89.5 per cent of the stock and as a neutral during World War II was not subject to the Trading with The Enemy Act.

The Justice Department had contended in the long litigation that went to the U.S. Supreme Court and the World Court at the Hague that Interhandel was merely a front for the German chemical trust, I.G. Farben.

MOON, OR BUST: James E. Webb, head of the U.S. space program, says the chances of landing an American on the moon within this decade are waning month by month, for lack of funds.

Asked at a news conference Wednesday about the delay in House action on the $141 million supplemental budget request of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Webb said: "We cannot authorize work to go forward until the funds are appropriated.

"Failure to grant these funds can delay Project Apollo or at least reduce the fighting chance we now have to achieve our goal.

"With each passing month we have a little less of that fighting chance to do the job in this decade."

Each month of delay in getting funds, he said, means an additional month of delay "on the other end."

GREEN LIGHT: The Communications Satellite Corp. is another step closer to being a going concern.

The Federal Communications Commission Wednesday gave the green light for the fledgling government-chartered corporation to construct a satellite system to relay communications between the United States, Canada and the Western Europe.

Further authorization will be needed before the satellites can be placed in orbit and used in experimental or commercial service.

The plans call for two satellites to be launched early next year into nearly equatorial orbit over the Atlantic Ocean. They will have a capability of about 240 two-way 4 kilocycles voice channels.

The regional conference of the Colorado Association of Real Estate Boards will open in Pueblo Friday with several members of the local board participating in the program.

James Walker, president of the Colorado Springs Board of Realtors, Inc. will discuss the question "If Only My Salesmen Would..." during a sales and workshop panel on Saturday. The other side of the problem "If Only My Broker Would..." will be the talk given by Terry Golden, salesman - member of the local board.

George L. Wood, executive vice president of the Colorado Springs organization, will have as his topic Saturday "If Only My Realtors Would..."

Friday's sessions will be devoted to board officers orientation. Attending these meetings from Colorado Springs will be Hugh E. Ingels, director of the Colorado Association of Real Estate Boards, along with both Walker and Wood.

Sixty-seven real estate firms in the city represent almost 400 members in the Colorado Springs Realty Board, which in turn is a member of the state organization. Only these representatives are authorized the use of the term "Realtor." The regional conference however is open to all real estate persons who wish current information on laws and markets effecting their profession.

County School Students Win New York Trip

Two El Paso county high school juniors, one from Monument and the other from Simla, have been awarded a three-week trip to New York, Washington, D. C., and the United Nations by the Odd Fellows of District 16 which includes all of El Paso County.

Winners of an annual contest conducted by the Odd Fellows were Anita Kay McFall, a junior at Lewis Palmer High School, Monument, who took first place, and Patricia Young, a Simla junior, who won second. Both girls will make the bus tour which is scheduled to begin June 13 and which will include a one-day visit to the New York World's Fair.

Deborah Kay Schaefer, a junior at Lewis Palmer, was named alternate.

Winners were selected on the basis of rigid scholastic attainments and leadership ability.

Henry Cannell 1332 N. Walnut St., chairman of the Odd Fellows committee which conducted the contest, said that contestants were required to write an essay on the United Nations, answer 100 questions concerning the UN, and then give a five-minute talk on the same subject.

He said that the idea is to select students who will have the ability to come back and tell others about the UN and about their trip in general. The trip is a combination educational pleasure tour.

Contestants, which include both boys and girls in sophomore and junior classes, are given a choice of general UN subjects, including the organization as a whole or any one of its parts such as UNICEF or UNESCO.

The lodge has been allowed by the United Nations to hold these contests for about 15 years. During that time, more than 9,000 students from all over the United States have been awarded the tours. Cannell said about 1,200 would be making the trip this year.

Expenses for the trip are paid by the lodge, and include a limited amount of personal spending money. When the local winners return they will be available to schools, clubs churches and various other organizations for talks on the UN and on their trip in general.

Mustang Line on Display Friday at Phil Long Ford

Styling and features of expensive European road cars are combined with an American mass-production price, compact economy, and traditional Ford quality in the Mustang — a new line of cars from Ford Division of Ford Motor Company — which goes on sale here Friday at Phil Long Ford, 117 S. Nevada Ave.

Aimed at the fastest-growing dimension in American motoring — driving for pleasure — the Mustang offers the practicality of a back seat and adequate trunk space in a car comparable in size to the classic two-passenger Thunderbird.

Mustang hardtop and convertible models feature — as standard equipment — such sports and luxury features as bucket seats, molded nylon carpeting, floor-mounted shift for both manual and automatic transmissions, all-vinyl interior, padded instrument panel, and full wheel covers.

Mustang options available to the performance-minded include a selection of three V-8 engines with up to 271 horsepower, four-speed transmission, quick-ratio steering, Rally-Pac with tachometer and clock, limited-slip differential, and a special handling suspension and sports tires.

Luxury options include a center console, power brakes and steering, automatic transmission, power convertible top, rear-seat radio speaker, remote-control trunk release, vinyl-covered hardtop roof, and air conditioning.

The Mustang is low — only four feet, three inches tall — with a wheelbase of 108 inches. It has an over-all length of 181.6 inches — just half an inch longer than the two-passenger 1957 Thunderbird — and is 68 inches wide. Yet with two bucket seats in the front and a bench-type seat in the rear, it offers five-passenger family seating.

Some of the most significant mechanical and functional breakthroughs in the history of car-building — particularly in the area of weight control—are incorporated in the Mustang. It weighs 400 pounds less than the 1957 Thunderbird, due largely to a new type of body construction.

The Mustang body is a sturdy, all-welded structure carried on a platform-type chassis which utilizes the drive-shaft tunnel as a rugged backbone. Main underbody members are galvanized and zinc-rich primer is used extensively to retard corrosion. Doors feature two-stage checks and Ford's "Bear-Hug" door latches.

Convertibles offer as standard equipment a sturdy, manually-operated top with counterbalancing springs and high-leverage latches for easy operation. A power-operated top is optional.

The passenger compartment of all Mustangs is surrounded with specially designed materials for excellent weather and sound insulation. The floor areas, for example, have a triple thickness of insulating material — a heavy mat, a jute pad, and nylon carpeting.

Beer Stolen In Burglary

The Knowles Distributing Co., 205 W. Vermijo Ave., was burglarized late Tuesday or Wednesday morning and an undetermined amount of beer stolen, police reported. Thieves entered by breaking a window.

Eugene W. Knowles, owner of the business, told police he discovered that several cases of beer were missing when he opened Wednesday morning. He is making an inventory to determine how much was stolen.

Footprints at the scene of a burglary at the Tire Service Center, 323 E. Costilla St., indicated it was a young boy who broke a window in the building and stole $5 from a cash drawer Tuesday night, according to a police report. Police are searching for a boy who has tried to steal money from the business in the past. The boy's description was given to police by employes at the Tire Service Center.

Towners Navajo Market, 1528 N. Tejon St., was burglarized last night and $13 in cash taken from two cash registers. Entry was gained by breaking out a plate glass window in the front door.

A tachometer and oil pressure and temperature gauges were stolen from the car of William N. Carpenter Tuesday night. Carpenter told police the car was parked in front of his home when the instruments were removed from the dash board.

A tool kit and emergency brake handle were stolen from the car of James J. Braverman, 2133 McArthur St. The theft occurred Tuesday night while the car was parked at 102 W. Costilla St. The tools are worth a total of $15, McArthur told officers.

Denverite Discusses History of Land Titles

A history of land titles in Colorado was part of the program presented at the Multiple Listing Service meeting of the Colorado Springs Board of Realtors Inc. Approximately 60 members heard James L. Roffe, agency director and title officer of the Title Guaranty Co. of Denver, discuss "Real Property."

The Realtors, meeting at the Embers, were shown a series of photographic slide presentations. The features were divided into two parts, "The Nature of Real Property" and "How Real Property Is Described."

The history of the original sources of land titles in the state was presented pictorially, ranging from the Mexican land grants through the patents for townsites and homestead acts.

Roffe pointed out that Realtors and other professions working with real estate must continue to educate people to a better understanding of property. Also these same professionals must always make land a safe commodity to buy and sell.

Tax Actions Boost London and U. S. Stock Prices

By SAM DAWSON
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—A tax rise boosts prices on the London stock exchange. A tax cut is credited with helping American stock prices hit new highs.

In both cases stock traders are betting on how consumers will react.

The London theory is that Britons will go right on drinking and smoking just as much as before this week's announcement of a 10 per cent hike in taxes on beverages and tobacco. And earlier fears that other industry products would also be hit were allayed.

The American theory is that the federal income tax cut which began showing up last month in larger take-home pay will mean that U.S. consumers will spend lots more for goods and services and that businessmen will step up production and sales competition to get the extra dollars.

But if the British tax increase and the American tax reduction had the same initial effect on stock prices, the motives of the two governments were quite different.

The London government is trying to put a brake on a booming economy that is edging toward inflation and increasing imports. Earlier it had raised interest rates with this same aim in mind.

The Washington government is trying to beef up an already prosperous economy. The hope is that it will expand enough to create jobs faster than the labor force is growing as teen-agers mature. The hope also is that in the process another round of inflation isn't set off with the effect of nullifying the gain in personal incomes.

Both governments would like to see their exports increase. Holding down prices and production costs is one way of helping producers sell their products abroad.

In the British case, the need to expand exports is acute because a prosperous home society has been importing more and the balance of trade now and then runs against Britain. This puts pressure on the pound sterling.

The United States for several years has had a favorable balance of trade—its exports have topped imports by a sizable amount. But it sends so many other dollars abroad—for loans, grants, investments, military expenditures— that the U.S. balance of payments has been running a deficit. And this doesn't help the dollar's standing and awhile back was causing a disturbing drain of U.S. gold reserves.

Springs Woman Named President Of Co'orado PTA

serve as president of the state organization for the next two years. The new two-year term was approved by the convention Tuesday. Prior to the change, officers served for three years.

Mrs. Anderson, who was nominated for the post by the state committee, was unopposed.

Most of the proposed by-law changes, which some felt would have given the state more power at the expense of the local units were defeated in convention voting.

Among the proposed changes defeated were proposals to add a president-elect, centralize state offices in the hands of the state board of managers; give the state executive committee the power to censor publications at conventions, and give the state executive committee the power to revoke charters of local chapters.

El Paso County delegates were among those who led the successful fight to defeat the proposed by-law changes.

The hotly contested debates for and against the changes got underway Tuesday as the convention opened in the Colorado State University Student Center at Ft. Collins.

Arguing for the power to censor publications distributed at the convention, Thomas M. Pickens, second vice president of the state PTA and assistant superintendent of Aurora schools, said:

"There are in our country two groups, one a Facist group and one a Communist group. Their literature says they should take over the PTA. We're simply seeing to it that we protect our organization when we don't allow this literature in.

"After all," he continued, "in co-operating with a rattlesnake I can't suggest that you give him the first bite."

Before the vote was taken an El Paso County delegate moved for an amendment to the proposed change which read "Only those publications approved by the Executive Committee of the Colorado Congress shall be distributed, displayed or offered for sale at convention."

The delegate wanted to add "or the Boards of Managers of any council or local unit" after the word congress in the original. She was ruled out of order by the convention parliamentarian who is a member of the state executive committee.

The proposed change lost when it lacked the two-thirds majority necessary to carry it.

The parlimentarian did allow an amendment to another proposed by-law change. A delegate moved that the section calling for a president-elect office in the state organization be stricken from the proposal which shortened the terms of state office and was successful.

Other controversial proposals which were defeated include:

The requirement that state officers serve two years on the state board of managers before becoming eligible for that office. This was defeated by a vote of 234 for and 283 against.

A proposal which would give the state board of managers the authority to "establish policy and procedure for implementing the program of the Colorado Congress" as voted in the convention. The board was denied the authority to establish policy and given the authority to establish procedure.

A proposal which would give the state executive committee the power to revoke the charter of any local unit that "violates the ethics of the policy and principles of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers." This was rejected by a vote of 118 for and 350 against.

The second incident happened at Harrison High School. Tools worth approximately $15 and $110 in cash and checks were taken. The money was in a safe which had been forced. Damage to windows, cabinets and the safe amounted to more than $200.

which might look like a repetition.

Gomulka said Wednesday he was happy to be able to stay "to continue meetings and talks." Following completion of a new economic agreement and an extension of the Soviet-Polish Friendship Treaty, the talks were believed to be on China.

The only member of the Soviet bloc not yet represented is Romania. Its Communist Central Committee is meeting in Bucharest to consider the latest Soviet attacks on China. So far they have not been published in Romania, which has been trying to steer a middle course.

New Brazilian Chief Promises Moderate Rule

By ROBERT BERRELLEZ

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Brazil's new military president has promised a moderate regime in which "remedies for leftwing extremism will not give birth to a reactionary right."

Gen. Humberto Castello Branco, 63, was inaugurated Wednesday to serve 21 months remaining in the term of leftist President Joao Goulart, deposed April 1 in a coup led by Castello Branco, then army chief of staff.

"All democratic and free nations will be our allies," said the new president, "just as all those people who desire to be free and want representative democracy can count on Brazil's support."

This was considered by some to hint at a diplomatic break with Cuba, which conservative political leaders have been demanding since Goulart's overthrow.

Cheers and applause from the packed Chamber of Deputies greeted Castello Branco's 17-minute inaugural address, which was viewed as shifting Brazil's foreign policy toward a pro-Western line.

Since Janio Quadros took office four years ago and Goulart succeeded him in 1961, Latin America's largest nation has followed an independent line with leftist, anti-American overtones.

Castello Branco put aside a long military career to head the 21-month interim government. Military leaders of the coup have promised elections in October, 1965, for a new president who would take office in January 1966.

In Rio de Janeiro, 600 miles southeast of this inland capital, Castello Branco's inauguration touched off wild celebrations.

The inauguration attracted nearly all the diplomatic missions, including the Soviet Union's. The U.S. mission was led by Ambassador Lincoln Gordon.

Castello Branco announced a new cabinet to help him attack Brazil's pressing problems, which include runaway inflation, a foreign debt of nearly $4 billion and widespread poverty.

Man Commits Suicide in Woodland Park

Threatening to shoot anyone who came near him, Wesley W. Wright, 65, Woodland Park, died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound about 6:15 p.m. Wednesday. Authorities said he had barricaded himself in his home, despite disuading efforts of law enforcement officers from Teller County Sheriffs Office, El Paso County Sheriffs office and the hiway patrol.

According to Teller County Sheriff Rufus Jones, Wright had recently bought his home and was the owner of a lumber firm in Woodland Park. The Wrights came there from Orange, Calif. Jones said that the victim had apparently died from the wound caused by a bullet fired from a 38 caliber pistol.

First officer on the scene, State Patrolman Ken Moline, asked for assistance from the El Paso County Sheriffs Office. Also at the scene was Teller County Under-Sheriff Harlan Inman.

Deputy Sheriff Franklin T. Ripley responded to the call for a gas gun. According to officers, Wright had acted "kind of wild," and had broken windows and smashed furniture, behind his barricade. Previously, Wright had reportedly chased his wife and son from the home.

El Paso County Under-Sheriff Doyle McCammon went immediately to the scene and was met by officer Ripley, who stated that the gas gun was no longer needed, as Wright had shot himself.

Sheriff Jones said that there was evidence that Wright had been drinking, some time before he shot himself.

The body was taken to Law Mortuary.

Dodger Manager Unhappy About Snider Trade

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Los Angeles Dodgers Manager Buzzie Bavasi was unhappy today about the San Francisco Giants' acquisition of Duke Snider from the New York Mets—but apparently not too concerned.

"Truthfully, I don't feel that Snider's going to the Giants will change the complexion of the race," said Bavisi, "but I'm a little burned up in principle."

The Dodgers manager recalled that the Los Angeles club sold Snider to the Mets last year for $40,000 after repeated entreaties by Met officials George Weiss and Don Grant who said they had plenty of money to spend.

"So what happens? Weiss and Grant turn around and sell the guy to the Giants without even the courtesy of a phone call to me, asking if we want to buy him back."

Evans Praises Local Leaders At Exchange Meet

Frank Evans of Pueblo, who seeks the Democratic congressional nomination in the Third Colorado District, told Exchange Club members this noon that "Colorado Springs has grown and prospered because local business and community leaders have had the willingness to sell this region's story where there was a sale to be made."

He also congratulated the Exchange Club members for their splendid support of the Boys' Club and other youth projects.

Evans, speaking on "The Future Growth of Colorado Springs" reminded his audience that "it took careful planning and energetic effort to bring government and industrial installations to Colorado Springs."

He recalled that Camp Carson was founded here during World War II because men like Chase Stone and Russell Law made the effort, "spending many hours at the Pentagon proving that the climate, terrain and hospitality of the Pikes Peak Region made this the logical location for such an installation.

"I doubt that anyone here is going to argue that the defense of the United States is of primary, in fact transcendent importance," Evans said. "And further, who here will say that this area should not provide those facilities and services which are the best defense buys for the United States? And that is why we must give credit where credit is due: to Dan Thornton working with Joe Reich, Charles Leming Tutt, Thayer Tutt, Doug Crouch, Mr. Stone and Mr. Law, as well as others we must thank, even though we do not now name them. They went out and sold the Pikes Peak Region story to the Site Selection Board for the Air Force Academy.

"Perhaps you have heard the story of how Joe Reich read a brief newspaper article announcing that the Air Force would be authorized to pick such a site. He was getting his hair cut at the time, and I think maybe a small plaque on that barber chair would be appropriate, perhaps reading 'Quiet, community-minded man thinking.'

"At any rate, Mr. Reich walked over to the Chamber of Commerce and started a chain of events that ended with the magnificent installation north of this city . . . one that will play an increasing role in the world and space responsibilities of the United States and in the economic future of this region."

"But," Evans added, "there is another part of this story that should be told. The congressman who led the effort for Colorado Springs was a man from Michigan. John D. Dingell, a Democrat, first proposed that an Air Force Academy be built here back in 1945. That was before the Air Force was a separate arm of the services.

"Congressman Dingell had loved Colorado Springs for many years. He had many friends here. And he had not only seniority in Congress, but he had effectiveness and influence in that great body, and he was of primary importance in assisting local leaders in bringing the Academy to this community.

"When the site north of Colorado Springs was named in 1954, Dingell gave credit to Chase Stone and to Jim McCoy, superintendent of the Union Printers Home for their work in encouraginging the establishment of Ft. Carson, Ent Air Force Base and later the Air Force Academy. Congressman Dingell died in 1955 and was succeeded by his son.

"We're all familiar wtih the more recent stories of how Ampex and Hewlett - Packard, and Kaman Nuclear and others came to Colorado Springs through Chamber of Commerce, municipal and state government and individual efforts.

"The point I want to stress is that such effort is not a political partisan issue, not a matter for a single sector of the economy . . . it concerns business, labor, government . . . all of us. That kind of effort brought about the authorization of the Frying Pan project.

"And I want to pledge to you that I have the energy, the purpose, the commitment of my generation to build this area. And in the new era we are entering, with its new challenges and opportunities, the same cooperation will be needed and more than ever, really effective leadership and congressional representation.

"Gentlemen," Evans concluded, "you are fortunate to be in this area at this time. Work with each other, work with business and government and your growth and prosperity will increase beyond your expectations.

"And let me work with you to that end. To the end that this district shall have representation to match the energy and dynamism of the best of community leadership. I have training, experience, energy, purpose — and the opportunity to build for you representation that responds and leads. Let me work for you and for the future of this region."

Cyprus Conflict Is Incoherent, Bunche Declares

Turkish Cypriots confront each other from behind earthworks while U.N. troops maintain dangerous patrols between the contending factions.

Once again Ledra street, Nicosia's main thoroughfare, becomes "murder mile" as it was known during the Greek Cypriot guerrilla war for independence from the British in 1955-59.

On opposite sides of a rocky ford dividing the city Greeks and Turks shout obscenities and occasionally squeeze the triggers of their rifles.

Once the firing begins, even the innocent become targets. A woman falls. More shots ring out.

A U.N. patrol rushes to the scene to restore the truce, but even the emblem of the world organization brings no quick halt to the firing. Only long pleading stills the guns.

The Greek Cypriot government blames the Turks. It says the Turkish Cypriots want to wreck the U.N. mediation effort and encourage an invasion by Turkey to obtain the partition of the island.

The Turks say they only fire to protect themselves from Greek Cypriot attacks, that the Greek Cypriot majority wants to wipe them out.

British officers, admittedly more friendly to the Turks because of their 1955-59 war with the Greek Cypriots, say the Turks have become more aggressive. There are reports that the Turks are better armed now.

Manitou Council May Act on Foos Resignation

A regular City Council meeting will probably act upon the recent resignation of Manitou Springs Police Chief Leonard Foos, according to a statement made today by Councilman Fred Jordan.

Jordan, a member of the police committee, had asked for an investigation of cirmcumstances leading to the Foos' resignation, at a special council meeting Wednesday. The resignation was not acted upon at that time.

"We have a regularly scheduled meeting of the council Tuesday, and I feel sure that the matter will be taken care of then," Jordan said.

Patrolman Russell Paul has been named acting police chief.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "Thank you Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayer," says Internal Revenue Commissioner Mortimer M. Caplin.

Caplin issued his bread-and-butter note to the nation's taxpayers Wednesday, shortly before the midnight deadline for filing returns on 1963 income.

He estimated that approximately 65 million Americans would contribute more than $100 billion in taxes to support their government this year — mostly without complaining too much.

Three Injured As Car, Trucks Crash in City

Three persons were injured when two pickup trucks and a car piled up at Pikes Peak Avenue and Union Boulevard Wednesday afternoon, the State Patrol reported.

Mary Bourne, 42, of the Black Forest complained of neck injuries. She was a passenger in a truck driven by Henry Bourne, 42, of the same address. She was not treated at the scene.

The driver of another truck, Archie W. Ringler, 49, of 2630 E. Monument St., complained of chest and shoulder injuries and was released at the scene. James Anderson Jr., 26, of 717 E. Las Animas St., suffered cuts on his legs but was not treated at the scene.

Anderson was driving east on Pikes Peak behind the two pickups when the trucks stopped for a vehicle which was turning in front of them. Anderson's car slammed into the back of one of the trucks, forcing it into the other, according to State Patrolman Paul Drake who investigated the accident. Drake estimated total damage in the wreck at $750 worth.

Local Man Says He Did Not Call Fire Department

Foster Yates, of 1224 W. Colorado Ave., this morning said he did not call the fire department for help, fearing a trash fire would get away from him Monday, as reported. He said only one fire truck, instead of two came.

"I had a hose and was in full control of the fire," said Yates.

The fire department today requested that anyone burning trash, other than in an incinerator, notify the fire department of his intentions, so that if anyone called the department with a report of the fire it might know in advance the nature of it.

Border With Russians Strengthened by China

By ROY ESSOYAN

HONG KONG (AP)—The Chinese Communists substantially strengthened garrisons on the Soviet-Chinese border in Sinkiang after bloody anti-Chinese demonstrations by Moslem minorities in Kuldja nearly two years ago, white Russian refugees from the area reported today.

The refugees said the Chinese have cleared a belt 20 miles deep and several hundred miles along the border to prevent another exodus of Moslems into Soviet Siberia.

Tension is high throughout the border area, they said.

Soviet propaganda broadcasts are demanding return of the border regions to the Soviet Union. The Chinese Communists are carrying on a virulent campaign denouncing Soviet Premier Khrushchev and his government.

A mass exodus by Moslems into the Soviet republic of Kazakhstan triggered riots in Kuldja, 50 miles from the Soviet border, on May 29, 1962, the refugees said.

The Chinese tried to stop the exodus. Several thousand Moslems stormed Kuldja's government building demanding permission to leave. Chinese Communist troops opened fire when the demonstrators attacked party headquarters, the refugees said.

Fragmentary reports of the bloody riots had leaked out of Sinkiang, one of the world's most isolated areas. The refugees confirmed the reports and added some details.

A group of 125 refugees reached Hong Kong this week after a 3,500-mile, 12-day journey by bus and train from Kuldja. About 1,300 more are expected to follow.

The Chinese Communists cleared the first group for departure after a four-year ban on exit permits.

"The May 29 demonstrations were the first and last in Kuldja," one refugee said. "The city has been turned into an armed camp. Troops are everywhere."

Soviet diplomatic and military representatives in Kuldja had been working on the Moslem minorities for many years, he said, encouraging them to return to the Soviet Union.

"In 1960 and 1961," he said, "the Soviet consulate in Kuldja, working through Moslem agents, started distributing Soviet passports to any and all Moslems."

The trek into the Soviet Union started. But when it reached flood proportions, he continued, Chinese authorities closed the border tight.

Problem Presented In Hedgehog Case

LONDON (AP) — The Henry Doubleday Association appealed today for help in determining the sex of hedgehogs.

The association is a charitable group which seeks nonchemical ways to control pests. It wants to put 1,000 pairs of hedgehogs to breed in walled gardens to control slugs.

"But although hedgehogs are plentiful, we can't tell he from she," said Lawrence D. Hills, the association's secretary. He explained that as soon as a hedgehog is caught, it rolls up into a ball.

"This makes close examination difficult," he continued.

"The only thing that can tell a female hedgehog is a male hedgehog," said Edmund Hallam, an authority on British mammals.

British to Sell Steel Cranes to Red Cuba

LONDON (AP)—A report that a British steel company is negotiating to sell Cuba heavy cranes has threatened a new dispute between the United States and Britain.

The Daily Mail reported the British firm, Steel & Co., was negotiating a $1.4-million contract with Fidel Castro's government.

The Cummins Engine Co., of Columbus, Ind., whose British subsidiary has supplied Steel & Co. with a dozen diesel engines in the past year, announced that if the Cuban deal goes through it will stop selling to the British firm.

A spokesman for Steel & Co. retorted that "We could use other makes if we wanted to."

The report also brought a protest from the U.S. Embassy that such a deal would be "a contravention of U.S. Treasury and export regulations."

A spokesman for Britain's Board of Trade commented: "Who could call a crane a strategic weapon?"

American and British authorities have clashed in the past year over sales of buses and other British goods to Castro.

Rehabilitation Is Emphasized In Oregon

By AZN STARK

SALEM, Ore. (UPI) — As the young father who had beaten his 2½-year-old son to death entered, Superintendent Paul J. Squier commented: "The boys here don't like that kind."

The "boys" are inmates of Oregon's experiment in modern penology, Oregon Correctional Institute (OCI).

Squier, a veteran of almost 40 years of prison work, ranging from guard at Alcatraz to warden of McNeil Island federal prison, is the driving force behind the experiment.

So far it's working.

OCI is designed for first felony offenders.

The institution's goal is rehabilitation. Its population includes murderers, burglars, car thieves.

The age of prisoners ranges from 15 to 59. Most are in their early 20's.

Nestled at the foot of rolling hills seven miles east of here, the institution's green-painted buildings take on a college campus appearance.

There are no walls, but the prison is ringed by a double fence. Armed towers have an unobstructed view of the fences, which are floodlighted at night.

Electrically operated double gates and doors—only one of which can be open at a time—control access to the grounds and buildings.

Inmates wear khaki wash shirts and neatly pressed pants.

A master control center supervises the cellblocks, eating areas, classrooms and vocational training units. There are an isolation unit for discipline and an indoctrination unit for new arrivals.

The illiterate are required to attend school full time.

Those qualified by educational ability, behavior and adjustment may enter vocational training classes. The competition for these classes is keen.

Classroom work and theory are a part of the courses which include practical experience in electric appliance, radio and television, typewriter and gasoline engine repair, sign, auto and furniture painting, gas and arc welding, bricklaying and carpentry, offset printing, cooking and barbering.

The operation of the shoe shop gives an insight into Squier's thinking. The shop concentrates on construction of corrective footwear, not normal shoe repair. Shoe industry leaders have advised Squier that new plastic shoes, designed to be discarded rather than repaired, soon will be on the market. Squier doesn't believe in training inmates for work that won't be available.

The institution accepted its first inmates in May, 1959. Squier was on the job in November, 1956, and worked with architects on the design.

Each cell is small, and the bunk frame is built in. "I wanted to make sure they didn't someday decide to put two inmates in each cell."

The cellblocks and main corridors have skylights: "You won't see skylights in any other prison, and over the years they save thousands of dollars in lighting bills."

The red coloring in the floors, and buff of the corridor walls results from dye mixed in the cement. "These areas won't have to be painted for 50 years, and that means big savings."

No inmate has yet escaped from within the fences, although four or five escape each year from work details outside the prison.

Squier admits it's still too early to get meaningful statistics on "graduates," but of the first 501 inmates, only 26 per cent failed. Eleven per cent committed technical parole violations and 14 per cent committed new felonies.

Nationally, Squier said, between 55 and 65 per cent are back in prison.

OCI has the nation's only inmate Junior Chamber of Commerce Chapter. There is a course in public speaking. A Toastmasters' Club is being organized. Squier said these extra activities "give inmates greater confidence in themselves."

PRETTY ONE SIDED

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Volunteers were all on the same side when a Civil War commission got ready to reenact the battle of Olustee, Florida's biggest engagement of that war. Everybody wanted to play rebels. The other side not only was Yankee but also it lost the battle.

'Some Changes' Will Be Made In CBS Show

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—After two years and more than 60 programs, there are going to be some changes made in CBS' "The Nurses."

"We're going into our third year and it's getting tougher all the time," conceded executive producer Herbert Brodkin. "We've covered a lot of subjects involving women. Now we've got to find a way to enlarge the show's platform and involve more people—mostly men—connected with the hospital."

The "larger platform" will be constructed even before the end of this season. One upcoming show, Brodkin noted, will be a comedy—about a TV show about nurses.

The producer said that he believes that the television fad for "realistic drama" is just about over.

"I don't think there's anything wrong with them—great playwrights have always been able to deal with serious stuff, but they were able to turn it into good entertainment. I don't think Hollywood can do that, not with all its limitations and precensoring of scripts."

Television — and Hollywood—like to follow a successful leader.

"There's nothing wrong with 'Beverly Hillbillies,' but one successful comedy show shouldn't affect all TV programming. Consciously or unconsciously, everybody is now looking for something to duplicate its success. That's wrong. Television needs all kinds of programs."

"My kind of show—a realistic play about the world as we live in it—is very hard to sell right now. Besides, in my opinion, television is in a creative slump, noticeable this year but it will be so next."

"CBS Reports" Wednesday night tackled a controversial, complicated subject. The economic, moral and ethical implications raised by recent British and American government reports linking cigarette smoking and disease.

The program traveled carefully and with fairness through all shades of opinion on the subject. The tobacco industry spokesmen had an opportunity to state its position as well as government officials, representatives of broadcasting, advertising, school authorities and students themselves.

The program could not, of course, offer any solution to the problem. But it did serve the purpose of opening up all sides of the controversy in an unemotional atmosphere.

The program was sponsored by manufacturers of show polish, automobile tires and cameras.

NBC's forthcoming Dennis Weaver comedy series, having been titled "Kentucky's Kid" and "Kentucky," now will be called "Kentucky Jones."

CBS's forthcoming series, originally called "The Reporter," was changed to "Yours Truly, Danny Taylor," and now has been changed back to "The Reporter."

Mama Must Take Her Little Lamb To College, Yet

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Mama has a little lamb who goes with her to school each day.

Mama has no choice.

"We couldn't find a baby sitter," explains Mrs. Donald J. Lewis Jr., 22, a senior at Lesley College. Her husband is a student at Boston University.

"I couldn't leave Sandra with just anyone. She's very special."

Sandra is the "lamb," all of 6 weeks old and the Lewis' first child.

Mrs. Lewis puts Sandra in a car bed and parks her in the cloak room during classes.

College authorities haven't exactly sanctioned this arrangement. On the other hand, they haven't raised a fuss about it either.

Neither has Sandra. She sleeps most of the time, and Mrs. Lewis insists that Sandra has yet to disturb a lecture.

"You know, I never thought to ask for permission," said Mrs. Lewis. "It just seemed natural to have Sandra with me."

There has been one problem. Mrs. Lewis' classmates at the women's college like to hold Sandra and play with her. Mrs. Lewis solved this by adopting one simple rule: "Hands off!"

Mrs. Lewis is to get her degree in education this June, but that's not going to end the baby-sitting problem. She already has a teaching job lined up in Sudbury, a suburb of Boston.

COLORADO SPRINGS
GAZETTE-TELEGRAPH
COLORADO SPRINGS—THURSDAY, APRIL 16, 1964 SECTION B

State C of C Board to Meet In Springs

The proposed additional state sales tax amendment and regional economic development progress in Colorado, are among major items to be reviewed Friday at the regular quarterly meeting of the Colorado State Chamber of Commerce board of directors at the Broadmoor Hotel.

Members of the board of directors from this area expected to attend are Robert Burghart Sr., G. A. Cheney and Don McMahon.

L. J. Baudino, Montrose businessman and president, reports that the meeting will be devoted to progress reports of various state chamber programs and detailed outlines of future activities.

A report on a study concerning the sales tax proposal will be made by a committee under the direction of Harold Ballard, chairman of the taxation council. Various aspects of the proposed amendment will be reviewed by members of the board.

Warren Terry of Greeley will describe progress in area economic development where efforts are concentrated to increase all phases of economic development through a "bootstrap — self-help" program on an area basis.

Other items to be reviewed include an expended program in economic education, the status of re-apportionment now being reviewed by the U.S. Supreme Court, and a report on the Public Lands Conference held earlier this month.

James Trissel To Criticize Art Seminar

James Trissel, art instructor at Colorado College, will serve as critic for the Colorado Springs Art Guild Seminar tonight at the Fine Arts Center.

Members will meet at 8 p.m. in the upstairs painting room. The Cache La Poudre Street entrance is used at the back of the center.

Trissel taught art at UCLA for the past three and a half years and this is his first year teaching at Colorado College.

Polio Clinic Slated for Friday Morning

The second of three oral polio vaccine special clinics will be held from 9 to 11 a.m. Friday at the City-County Health Department building.

The vaccine is available to all persons of all ages at no cost and those who never received any of the vaccine or missed some of the types in the recent campaign.

The current campaign began in March when 588 persons received the vaccine. The final clinic will be held next month.

William Wells Appointed By District 11 Board

The District 11 Board of Education Wednesday approved the appointment of William P. Wells as director of the district's audio visual services department.

Described by school superintendent Thomas B. Doherty as "a man with ideas, enthusiasms and experience," Wells will come here from Pullman, Wash., where he is presently employed as director of the audio-visual department at Washington State University. The 34-year old Wells is expected to provide leadership and ideas in new approaches to teaching, according to Doherty.

The superintendent said Wells "is interested in the application of the technological devices in teaching-educational television, teaching machines and the various other audio-visual media."

Wells received his BS from Eastern Oregon State College and his MA from Oregon State University. This summer he will receive his Doctor's degree in audio-visual education from Washington State University. Wells is married and the father of two children.

Other appointments announced at a Wednesday board meeting included that of Gerald L. Beard as principal of the Washington School. Beard is currently assistant principal of the Audubon School. Emmet J. Dunlevy, teacher of English and counselor at East Junior High will become assistant principal at Horace Mann Junior High. Sidney H. Berg, assistant principal of the Longfellow and Mark Twain Schools was named as principal of the new Columbia School. All of the appointments become effective on Aug. 31, 1964.

In other business before the board Wednesday it was announced that Carl H. Gustafson of Quinn and Co. Investment Securities Corp. has advised the board that he could not get a legal opinion approving the district's refunding of just part of a bond issue. The board had enquired about the possibility of refunding part of an issue since there would be no financial advantage to the district in refunding an entire issue. Doherty said there is a possibility the present law dealing with bond refunding could be changed if a sufficient number of school boards thought it necessary.

The board unanimously approved a motion opposing the setting up of a business district between Murray Boulevard and Constitution Ave. The proposed district would create a traffic hazard for students attending the James Madison School, board members said. The board's objection will be made known to the planning commission.

A request from the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Post 4051, for use of Erps Field behind the Palmer High School Gym was approved. The VFW had requested that the Junior Olympic Association be allowed to use the field for practice from June 15 to July 4, in preparation for the Junior Olympic track meet in Boulder.

The board also approved a request from the Red Cross for use of a district pool for a water safety course June 8-12.

The board heard a construction progress report by building consultant Walter Kuenning who said that there has been some delay in construction at several school construction sites because of a roofer's strike, but that the projects are expected to finish on schedule.

Pueblo Woman Has Purse Snatched

A Pueblo woman had her purse snatched from her in front of the Caravan Club, 2311 E. Platte Ave., early this morning, the sheriff's office reported.

According to Deputy Sheriff Bob Snuggs, Annie Sisneros was in front of the club shortly after midnight when two men walked up to her and one of them grabbed her bag and ran. It was worth approximately $5 and contained $4 in cash with various personal papers.

Woman Fined for Failure To Stop at 'Bad' Corner

Everyone Wednesday in Municipal Court agreed Institute and Uintah Streets is a "bad" intersection, but acting Judge Clinton Cole found Mrs. Vickie Logan guilty of failing to stop there March 28 for the stop sign and fined her $15.

Mrs. Logan, according to Police Officer Quinten Conrad, was almost through the intersection, headed south on Institute, when her car was struck by Don Ray Dunlap's car, headed east on Uintah.

Conrad said Mrs. Logan told him at the scene she didn't remember whether she stopped or not. In court Wednesday, she said she was sure she had stopped.

She said the upgrade and trees interferred with her seeing Dunlap's car prior to the impact, and when she did she speeded up to get out of his way to no avail.

"If you stopped, and started up again from a complete stop, why didn't you stop when you saw his car coming toward you?" Deputy City Attorney Bob Isaac asked. Mrs. Logan said she didn't see Dunlap's car until it was "on top of me."

Mrs. Lois Moore, a passenger in Mrs. Logan's car, testified she was "almost positive we stopped," and said Dunlap came to their car after the impact and said to Mrs. Logan, "You ran a stop sign and you're going to pay for it."

Mrs. Logan had their two children, both aged 2½ years, in the front seat between them.

Dunlap, 1001 E. Columbia St., said Mrs. Logan ran the stop sign. He said he applied his brakes, throwing his father Ray Dunlap against the windshield, and hitting the woman's car broadside.

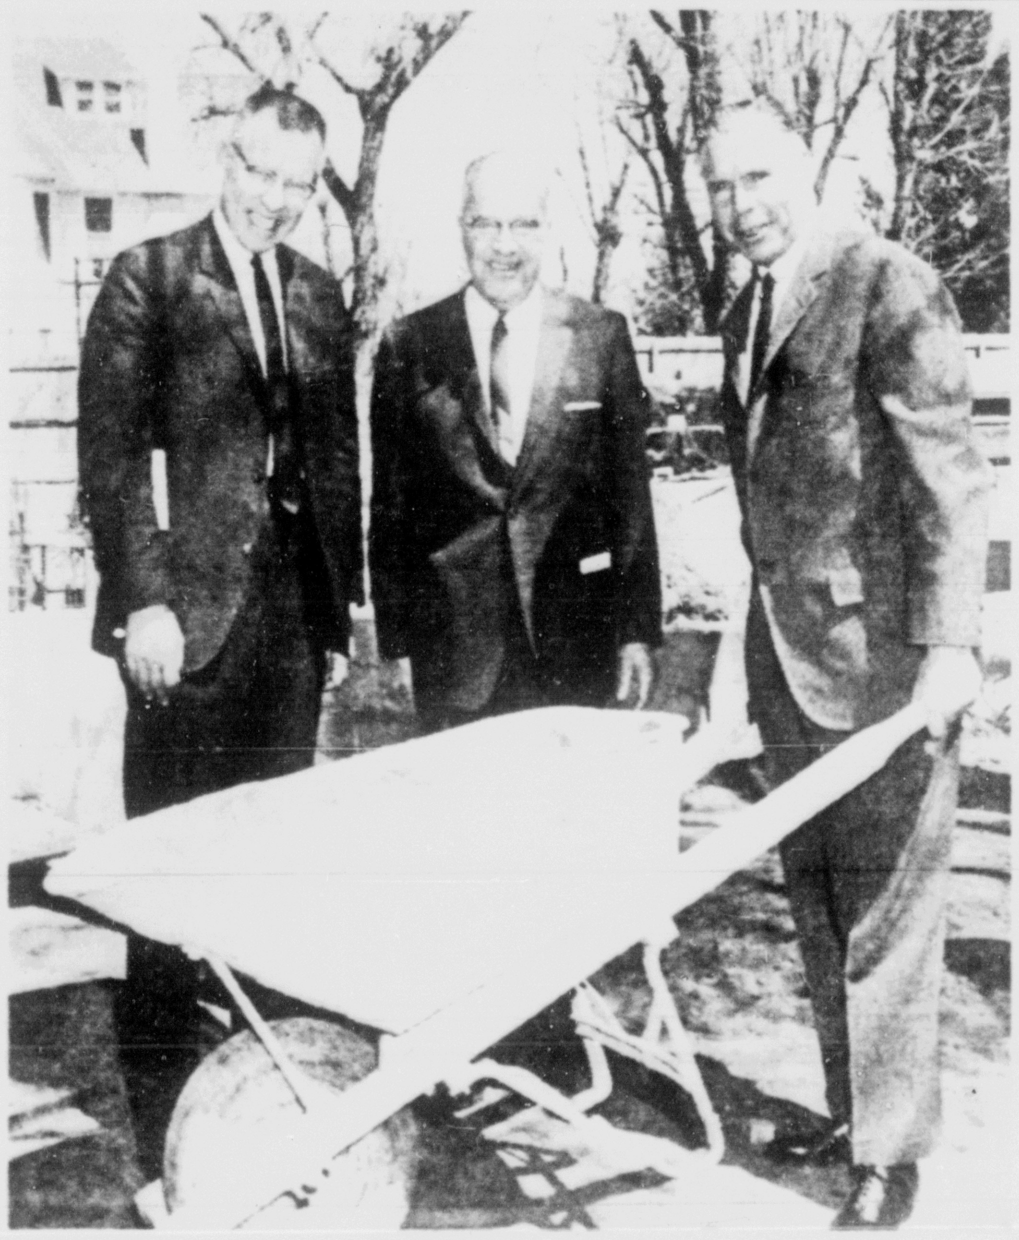
Mrs. Logan's husband, Jack B. Logan, 806 E. Boulder St., said he investigated the scene later and said drivers coming from either direction cannot see each other because of the upgrade and trees.

"You can inch out of the intersection to see, can't you?" Isaac asked. Logan said yes, and launched into what Dunlap was alleged to have said to his wife. Isaac pointed out that Dunlap didn't say this in court and as far as the court was concerned, it was hearsay.

Jesse Jameson, 70, 2504 Manitou Blvd., was found guilty of making an illegal turn and fined $5.

Marvin Reese, 41, 501 Grand Blvd., Security, was found guilty of speeding and fined $15.

Bruce Berner, 22, 120 Rainier Dr., pleaded guilty to speeding and was fined $15.



CEREMONIES LAUNCH HEALTH CENTER—Formal groundbreaking ceremonies were conducted Wednesday on the Colorado College campus for construction of the $225,000 Boettcher Health Center. Shown with a wheelbarrow of cement into which some good luck pennies were thrown are (from left) Pres. Lloyd E. Worner of Colorado College, Armin B. Barney, chairman of the college board of trustees, and Cris Dobbins, chairman of the Boettcher Foundation, which contributed $200,000 for the health center. Boettcher Health Center Ground Broken at CC

Ground was broken Wednesday at 11 a.m. for the Boettcher Health Center, which will be erected on the Colorado College campus.

Executives of the Boettcher Foundation and officials of Colorado College took part in the ceremony. Invited guests included 1,300 students of CC, the 115 members of the faculty. The 42 Boettcher scholars attending the college were recognized.

The first soil was turned over by Cris Dobbins, board chairman of the foundation, and Armin Barney, CC chairman of the board, using a gold-plated shovel.

Other officials present for the groundbreaking of the 20-bed health center included E. Warren Willard, president of the Boettcher Foundation; John C. Mitchell, executive director; Lloyd E. Worner, president of Colorado College; Carlisle B. Guy, associate architect, and Gerald H. Phipps, general contractor.

The center is being built under a $200,000 grant from the Boettcher Foundation of Denver and a $25,000 grant from the Kresge Foundation of Detroit, Mich. Completion is scheduled for September.

The Boettcher Foundation was established in 1937 by Charles and Claude Boettcher to aid education and philanthropic causes in Colorado.

One of its principal activities in the field of education has been to provide four-year scholarships annually to 40 freshmen entering colleges and universities in the state.

This year, 42 Boettcher scholars are enrolled at CC, 18 of them freshmen.

Regarded by architects and educators as a departure in campus infirmary design, the circular building which will house the health center features study lounges and other aids to help students keep up with class work while they are ill.

The grant from Boettcher followed publication of a 32-page report on the small college infirmary compiled by Colorado College and the two other liberal arts colleges under a $10,000 grant from Educational Facilities Laboratories of New York.

The report also contained a proposal for a small college health center by Caudill, Rowlett and Scott of Houston, Tex., the firm that designed CC's Olin Hall of Science.

The "let - them - study - while - they - get - well" was a key concept in planning the health center. The report pointed out the penalty often imposed on students by prolonged hospital stay, or the necessity of being sent home.

IRS Office Returns to Regular Schedule

Roger E. Ward, local administrative representative of the Internal Revenue Service announced today that effective today, the local office will return to its regular work schedule of audits and delinquent collections with Monday of each week being set aside to assist the public as "Public Assistance Day."

The office is located at 521 South Tejon St. (2 doors north of the temporary Main Post Office).

In view of the fact that all local personnel have regular audit and collection assignments, it is not possible to give five-day-a-week assistance to the public in the same manner as has been given from the 1st of January through the 15th of April, Ward added. "It would be very much appreciated if the public will bear in mind this Monday 'Public Assistance Day' and confine their request for assistance to this special day each week. Should you have a question that can be answered by telephone feel free to call 636-5171 for assistance."

MAYOR LOSES, LEADS MULE — Mayor Harry Hoth's team came out in the No. 2 spot in a Chamber of Commerce membership drive, and this morning the mayor paid off by leading a mule on which the winning captain, Larry Ochs, rode through the business district. Hoth's team members walked behind the mule along Pikes Peak Avenue while Och's team enjoyed the comfort of convertible automobiles.

Homestake Bids Postponed For One Week

Bids for the construction of Homestake Dam, Homestake collection system and Missouri Creek Tunnel near Leadville have been postponed until 2 p.m. April 21.

These bids were originally scheduled to be opened Tuesday afternoon in the office of Aurora City Manager Robert O. Wright but the bid opening was delayed one week because contractors required more time to study plans and specifications for the project.

The $60 million joint project between Colorado Springs and Aurora is designed to provide each of the two cities with about 37,000 acre feet (approximately 13 billion gallons) of water annually under normal precipitation conditions.

Homestake Reservoir will include a dam 225 feet in structural height and containing 3,300,000 cubic yards of fill. Once completed, it will have a capacity of about 43,000 acre feet of water.

Bids on Homestake delivery conduit system will be opened in Wright's office at 2 p.m. April 28. This will include some 50 miles of 66-inch pipeline, and include two tunnels about 7,700 feet in length.

Construction progress is scheduled to bring the first water to Colorado Springs and Aurora in the spring of 1966.

An access road to the Homestake Lake has already been completed and work is now under way on a 5.5 mile tunnel under the Continental Divide. More than a mile of this tunnel has already been drilled.

Wasson Students Prepare for Election Friday

Wasson High School assembly hall will resound with election promises today, as the student government cabinet goes into high-gear in a prelude to annual election of student officials Friday.

Candidates will be elected to the offices of president and vice president. Also secretarial posts including: treasurer, morale, publicity, records, assemblies, social, safety and courtesy. Installation of the new officers will be held April 24.

Stop Reading by Word . . . and Get Better Grades

15—LEARN TO JUDGE WHAT YOU READ

Time your reading of this column and compare your speed with that indicated at the end. The expected speed assumes a daily five per cent improvement.

●

Some years ago a Chief Justice of the United States wrote: "All truth is relative." Do you see the contradiction the learned man uttered in just a few short words?

He was expressing an absolute truth to the effect that there are no absolute truths. This is a sample of the kind of writing we'll be dealing with in the remaining columns.

The first 13 columns set out to double the amount of your reading and to help you get a deeper understanding of what you read. This means you are a better "observer" of the reading scene. Now you become a better judge of the passing scene. This means being a good observer "plus" knowing how to judge what you read. Critic is a synonym for judge.

What will you be criticizing? Mostly other criticisms. For example, the fellow who wrote the cigarette commercial is expressing his opinion or the manufacturer's. When you spot the fact that he mentioned everything in his opinion except the tobacco, that's your criticism of his criticism. Or you personally like a movie, but your newspaper panned it. Now your personal like isn't worth much unless there are some reasons, some norms, some criteria on which your personal like is based. Liking a certain actor is no reason for a favorable criticism of an entire production. If the movie critic on your paper used that norm, he would be looking for a job.

Some book critics don't like Hemingway, some do. Their opinions are worth your time only if they base their judgments on the norms of what makes a good novel. You learn those norms and then you read Hemingway. Now you measure one against the other and you're a critic. Then criticize the critics.

This can be a real test of honesty: don't look only for what will reinforce your own judgment. Have an open mind whether it's a novel, play or poem. Bring the norms of the field with you when you read; then judge.

The biggest paid critic on your newspaper is the editor. He passes judgment on the whole scene: local; national, international, outer-spatial. We'll learn how to criticize him, the columnists and the letters to the editor. And we'll be interested in the news-and-views magazines and books of opinion. Every word spoken at the United Nations is criticism; the actions of our government in Panama, Cuba, South Viet Nam—these all flow from policy, from opinion. Each is subject to human error, bad judgment.

We'll ask the right questions; we'll seek the basic norms for these opinions; we'll learn their logic or their fallacies. There are hundreds of tricks in opinion writing when a writer is trying to foist his judgment on you.

Learn critical reading and you won't just be a puppet of one opinion-maker. You'll be judge and jury on your own merits. You'll be a critic worth listening to because you'll have reasons for your opinions, not cliches to support a pet prejudice.

France Will Not Leave SEATO, Rusk Declares

By SPENCER MOOSA

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP)—Secretary of State Dean Rusk said today he doesn't think France will pull out of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization even though it refused to join the alliance's endorsement of the anti-Communist war in South Viet Nam.

Arriving here after a three-day SEATO ministerial conference in Manila, Rusk said the organization must be prepared to act if necessary to keep South Viet Nam from falling to the Reds.

"France has obligations under SEATO," Rusk told newsmen. "There is no indication that France itself wishes to withdraw from those treaty obligations.

"I think that the differences of view which came up at Manila does not go to the question of one or another member withdrawing from SEATO."

French Foreign Minister Couve de Murville told the SEATO meeting issuance of the declaration was unwise and that France would abstain. The seven other SEATO members joined in the declaration.

Soon after his arrival for a 23-hour visit, Rusk called on President Chiang Kai-shek.

Rusk said he wanted to consult Chiang's "wisdom and experience and compare our impressions of the world situation, the events that are going on inside the Communist world, the great complexity of relations between the Communist world and the Free World, and to take up some of the very specific problems affecting the peace and security of the Pacific Ocean States has some "specific questions" such as the release of area."

Rusk also said the United States has some "specific questions," such as the release of American citizens, it would like to resolve in the talks that the U.S. and Red Chinese ambassadors in Poland hold periodically.

But Rusk said the talks had brought no serious discussions of major problems. "The Chinese Communists always begin with the notion that it is an 'indispensable condition for any action, such as the release of our prisoners, that we agree to surrender Formosa to Peking,'" Rusk said. "That we will not do."

Disturbances Frowned on in Civil Rights Talk

WASHINGTON (AP)—Republican and Democratic senators charged with shepherding the civil rights bill through the Senate have warned that illegal demonstrations and disturbances that lead to violence "are hurting our efforts."

The statement was issued Wednesday night by Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., and Thomas H. Kuchel, R-Calif., after proposals by splinter civil rights group for disrupting traffic to the New York World's Fair and other disorders.

The two senators declared "Illegal disturbances, demonstrations which lead to violence or injury, strike grievous blows at the cause of decent civil rights legislation."

"Unruly demonstrations and protests that bring hardship, and unnecesary inconvenience to others—even by those who have long suffered indignities—are not helping the cause of civil rights," the statement said.

"Indeed, they are hurting our efforts in Congress to pass an effective civil rights bill."

As the Senate debate stretched into its 32nd session today, Sen. Norris Cotton, R-N.H., joined senators who are urging amendment of the House-passed bill.

Cotton said in a statement he would vote for cloture—to cut off debate on the measure so that it can be voted on—"but not until real consideration is given to corrective amendments."

Cotton, regarded as a civil rights supporter, said the bill, "is shot through with flaws and inconsistencies. For instance, it circumvents the right of trial by jury and defies the Constitution by authorizing discrimination against atheists."

Sen. A. Willis Robertson, D-Va., said the measure now contains "an unprecedented grab for naked power by the attorney general."

He declared that similar provisions were overwhelmingly defeated in the Senate when both President Johnson and the late President John F. Kennedy were members of the chamber.

Grandma Still Can't Leave Lithuania

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actress Ruta Lee, who convinced Soviet authorities that her elderly grandmother should be permitted to leave Lithuania, has another potential obstacle: the United States Congress.

Miss Lee, 27, had been trying to get her grandmother, Ludvisa Kamandulis, 84, to California.

She said she learned Tuesday that the U.S. quota for Lithuanians is filled—"Maybe for a couple of years. And at 84, how long can you wait?"

She got the news, she said, from the State Department by telephone.

The telephone call to the Kremlin last winter resulted in a visa that permitted her to visit her grandmother in Lithuania.

TORCH OF LIBERTY

NEW YORK (UPI)—An Italian steelworker has arrived in the United States to present a silver "Torch of Liberty" to Mrs. John F. Kennedy.

Marino will deliver the 20-inch torch along with a testimonial signed by provincial and Turin officials to Mrs. Kennedy in Washington.

HINTS FROM Heloise

By HELOISE CRUISE

Dear Heloise:

Have you wondered at times what to do with that "one earring" because the mate has been lost? I'm referring to the clip-on type.

Instead of throwing them away, I have found them useful—just that "needed touch" on a blouse, dress, etc.

I also use them as hair ornaments. There are times when a stray hair just won't stay combed down, or one wants a touch of glamor, and a bobby pin would not look nice enough. That is when I survey my assortment of single clip earrings and choose just the right one to use for the moment.

The many compliments I get when putting that one earring to use seems to make this suggestion worthwhile passing on. —Aida V. Kaye

Aida: What a great idea!

Get out all those old earrings now, gals, and dress up your hair for that "special occasion." One can put any earring on the end of a bobby-pin and slip that bobby pin through their hair. It's darling. —Heloise

Dear Heloise:

Clean your stove on washday the easy way.

I am from Germany and it hurts me to see all this hot soapy water being wasted.

I put all removable parts from my gas stove in a bucket and set it in my washtub (one washday one burner, etc.). All that soapy hot water removes anything burnt-on and I just rinse and dry.

Never remove the stove parts until all your wash is done. After a few loads of good hot soapy water have emptied over the parts, they look like new with no effort on your part.

I find this much easier than making "stove-cleaning-day" a project that gets put off for weeks and become a chore. Just try it. It's "wunderbar." —Auf Wiedersehen, M. J. W.

Dear Heloise:

This may not be a very original idea because it seems so simple, yet I never thought of it before.

In an emergency, I find it very simple to use my electric shaver to trim the neck area and side burns of my hair.

It keeps my hair looking very neat and the job is even simpler if you have a wife do it for you. —Ted Hawranek

Dear Heloise:

Here's another use to add to that never-ending list of uses for nylon net.

Sew an 18-inch-strip of nylon net to the bottom of short sheets and blankets. Gives you lots more tuck-in. It's 72 inches wide which keeps one from piecing material used for this purpose. —Faithful Reader

Dear Heloise:

I scald my tomatoes as soon as I come home from the market and refrigerate them. They are always nice and cold and extremely easy to peel when needed because after a slight scalding the skin slips right off without wasting any of the tomatoes. Whether you skin the tomato immediately after scalding or refrigerate and then scald, it still works! —Louise Hocking

Letter Of Love

Dear Heloise:

Some time ago one of your readers suggested turning the ironing board around while doing their ironing. I don't remember just what she was ironing but I turn my ironing board around to iron my husband's shirts. They are 19-34, pretty big!

I cannot tell you how much time I save but it must be a lot. Seems like I can iron two shirts in the time I used to iron one, so please tell your readers with king-sized husbands to try it.

My thanks to you and the lady who first suggested this. —Lucille Greene

COMING STYLES FOR WACS — S. Sgt. Laura M. Potter (with coat) and Spec. 5 Wilma J. Taylor, members of the Women's Army Corps, caused heads to turn at Army Air Defense Command (ARADCOM) headquarters, Colorado Springs, as they modeled items of Army women's uniforms. Sergeant Potter of the 9th Data Processing Unit wears the raincoat and hood presently under development. The shirtwaist modeled by Specialist Taylor of the Office of the Comptroller is an improvement on the existing shirtwaist and will be placed in supply channels by size as the present stock is depleted. It is made of drip-dry material, has short sleeves and action pleats. A black tab, which is part of the shirtwaist, will reduce procurement, stocking, shipping, and ordering requirements by eliminating separately ordered tab worn now.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Double
3 ♠	3 NT	Pass	4 ◇
Pass	5 ◇	Pass	Pass Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠

Neither vulnerable. West deals.

The major disadvantage to learning percentages and the proper handling of card combinations from the books is that the subject cannot properly be separated from the conditions which confront the player in practice. South's experience in today's hand is an excellent case in point.

South decided not to stand for the three notrump contract. He reasoned that, since his values were primarily distributional and inasmuch as North was a passed hand, it was unlikely that the partnership possessed sufficient high card strength to land a notrump game. The final contract of five diamonds, in fact, was a distinct stretch.

West opened the king of spades and the ace was played from dummy as South dropped the jack. Trumps were drawn in two rounds winding up in the North hand and then a small heart was led. East followed with the five—he saw no reason to alert declarer to his holding in the suit by splitting his honors—and South played the nine. West was in with ten of hearts and he promptly shifted to a club through the dummy's king. After mopping up two tricks in that suit, East waited to score yet another heart trick putting the declarer down by two.

Although South's play of the nine of hearts from his hand was technically correct—it wins whenever East has the king-ten or queen-ten and loses only when East has specifically the king-queen-he could not reasonably expect his strategy to be successful in the present instance. Even if the nine of hearts forced out a high honor from West, the latter was almost certain to make the club shift through North's king that would net the defense two more tricks.

In other words, since East's opening bid marks him with the ace of clubs, South must exert every effort to keep his partner out of the lead to protect dummy's club holding from a fatal attack. The only hope for declarer, then, is to find East with both the king and queen of hearts, and the proper play by South is the jack.

Once the jack of hearts wins the trick, declarer continues with the ace and another heart clearing the suit. When he regains the lead, a club can be discarded from dummy on the 13th heart. One club is conceded to the opposition and South's remaining clubs are ruffed away.

Dear Abby--

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Now Become a Man!

DEAR ABBY: I am a 21-year-old boy who is about to be drafted. I am not a coward, but I would just rather not go for two reasons. One is that I am used to my privacy and don't like to have a lot of people around me. The other is I know that I won't be able to adjust to Army life. The only way out, as I see it, is to get married, but I can't seem to find a girl. Can you help me? —LOOKING

DEAR LOOKING: Look, buddy, if every American male ducked military service for the reasons you give, our country would be a sitting duck for its enemies. Your survival would be a bigger problem than your "privacy." And your "adjustment" would be to bondage rather than to a brief hitch for Uncle Sam. Sign up and grow up. It'll do you good.

DEAR ABBY: Would you please put a word in your column explaining to people that widowed and divorced women are still addressed as "Mrs."? So many of my Christmas cards were addressed "Miss", - or worse yet, no title whatsoever. This makes a husbandless woman feel like "nothing." —"A MRS."

DEAR MRS.: I have written this many times in my column, but I will write it again. Once a woman has been married, unless she arranges to resume her maiden name she is never again a "Miss." P.S. Many women choose to omit either the Miss or Mrs. from THEIR correspondence — thus adding to the general confusion.

DEAR ABBY: How do you feel about a "Come and see us sometime" type of invitation.

My husband seems to think it is perfectly all right. He is forever dragging me places where we are not expected just because the people have said, "Come and see us sometime." Nine out of ten times it is apparent we have inconvenienced them even though they act polite, and glad to see us. My husband thinks that everyone likes unexpected company because it wouldn't bother him one bit if folks dropped by our house when the place was a mess and I had nothing to serve. But it would bother me plenty. I can't drive this point home to him. Can you? —UNNERVED

DEAR UNNERVED: A "come and see us sometime" type of invitation should not be taken seriously. When folks really want your company, they call and invite you for a specific time.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "Elinore at S.C.": I don't agree that "a little gossip is nothing." A hole is also "nothing"—but you can break your neck in it.

Get it off your chest. For a personal, unpublished reply, write to ABBY, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, Calif. Enclose a stamped, self - addressed envelope.

AT&T Stockholders To Get Another Share

NEW YORK (AP)—Next June 22 the 2.35 million shareholders of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. will get a second share of common stock for each one now owned.

The 2-for-1 stock split, second for AT&T and probably the richest in business history in gross values involved, was approved Wednesday at the company's 79th annual meeting. The vote for the split was overwhelming—about 99.4 per cent.

The action climaxed a five-hour session attended by 4,500 members of the nation's largest stockholder family in an armory in the Bronx.

Just before the meeting, directors declared the regular $1 quarterly dividend. It is payable July 1 to stockholders of record May 28, effective day of the impending split.

The payment will be made on the old shares, not split shares, and beginning in October dividends on the split shares will be made at a rate of 50 cents a share.

Nurse Fills Prescription For Peace in Jungle Village

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI) — One Yankee Doodle damsel's recipe for fulfillment: be a nurse, join the Peace Corps and ship out to Togo, West Africa.

Leave behind electricity, running water, nylon hose, gourmet foods, family and friends.

Tote skill, love and an unsatiated appetite to help the have-nots, including hundreds of children who accept the pain and disfigurement of smallpox as natural because they have been denied a simple inoculation.

Reinforce yourself by knowing that they have had to suffer needlessly. No one has introduced them to the medical miracle that prevents the sickness that kills almost as often as it maims.

No one, that is, until the Peace Corps sent you—and others like you—their way.

Such thoughts propelled a New York nurse, Peggy McEvoy, 23, to her assignment in West Africa 18 months ago. She has been living ever since in mud huts with thatched roofs and bathing in icy streams shared by ducks and goats.

At times, her heart almost breaks over the resignation of the people to the fact that seven out of nine children die of starvation during the dry season. It's news to them that the deaths are preventable.

In letters to her mother, Mrs. J. P. McEvoy, the nurse describes some of the problems, including her own hardship, but she says this is "the first quiet, peaceful, fulfilling living I've done."

"The poeple treat us as if we've lived here all our lives," she wrote. "And I really could not be happier in the sense that everything is so free and sincere.

"You can run up and hug a baby if you want to, or invite 10 little urchins into your house for dinner or the night or forever. Anything we want to do for them is met with giggles and gratitude.

"The poverty of the people and the clinic where I work is unbelieveable.

"These tiny little kids bring themselves to the hospital—say age six with their one-year-old brother strapped to their back—and their little piece of gauze bandage that they have carefully washed to be put back on their ulcers, which all the kids have.

"If they have lost their bandages, they get scolded royally and perhaps sent home with a gaping wound because there just isn't any equipment.

"There are two test tubes to analyze blood of over 300 people a day, two forceps to dress the wounds of maybe 400 people a day."

The children under quarantine in the smallpox sector of a primitive hospital struck Miss McEvoy as among the neediest.

"Sometimes they don't even get fed because no one wants to penetrate the contagious house," she said. "It's like going into a zoo, going in there at night. Frogs, bats, snakes compete for space."

A recent S.O.S. to the nurse's mother and friends back here resulted in the strangest shopping expedition. The list of needed items included: dozens of pair of sneakers, ballons and other small toys for the sick children. The shoes would help protect feet from parasites.

"I gave a pair of sneakers to a little boy sick with tuberculosis," Miss McEvoy wrote, thanking her mother for the crate of gifts for needy children.

"He is my right arm when I'm on night duty. He washes syringes and eats my dinner. He wears a long flowing pink gown called a bubu and now has funny red feet sticking out of them.

"The balloons are a wild success and decorating the pediatric ward."

Another crate of toys later arrived from Hong Kong, the gift of Louis Marx, the toy manufacturer and a family friend.

For the children, Christmas came twice during the last year, Miss McEvoy reported. She urges her mother to continue to help, having a group of women raise money for milk or toys needed in the small nursery from two to five schools organized for children.

"They are mostly left in the streets to fend for themselves while the mothers go to market to make some money to feed them," she said.

"There are over 600 children crowded into one large room and just kept there to recite verse or sing . . . no toys, no plays to play. The needs of these people are so great, and yet they are such a happy and beautiful accepting sort."

Miss McEvoy received her nursing degree at Columbia-Presbyterian Hospital. Previously she had attended the Academe Lubecke and the Sorbonne in Paris, the Chalet Marie Jose in Gstaad, Switzerland, and Mercer Academy in Havana.

Her work in West Africa has included a demographic study for the Togolese government. She also is working on a report which the World Health Organization (WHO) is publishing as a basis for setting up other rural public health projects.

To her mother, a writer and the widow of J. P. McEvoy, a roving editor for The Reader's Digest, there aren't words to describe the feelings stemming from the nurse's selfless work.

Mrs. McEvoy especially prizes a thank-you note from one of the parents in West Africa who received one of the gifts she sent.

"Dear my friend," the West African wrote. "For the great present which you have sent our family, I say thank you.

"Your child, Peggy, is very good. She is funny and I love her very much. She will become a good mother for her future family."

P.S. — The present? Red sneakers.

Wild Natural Gas Well Capped at Last

CALUMET, Okla. (AP) — A wild natural gas well that spewed approximately four million cubic feet of gas in this central Oklahoma area for more than two days was capped Wednesday.

The well blew out Monday and experts estimated it was leaking at a rate of about two million cubic feet every 24 hours. Twenty-six persons living in the rural area were evacuated because of the danger of fire or explosion. They have returned to their homes.

J. H. Abernathy, president of the Big Chief Drilling Co., which drilled the well for Pan American Petroleum Corp., said the well was capped about 3:30 p.m.

A hole was drilled in the pipe below the surface and a mixture of drilling mud and fibrous material was forced into the opening to plug the valve that failed.

He May Keep Horses Under Bankruptcy Law

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP) —Paul Amos Sandblom, bankrupt Corpus Christi investor, claims he can keep his 1964 Cadillac and two registered quarter horses under an old bankruptcy law.

The old law provides that a bankrupt person can keep one carriage, a wagon and two horses if he has a family. Sandblom, insurance agent who filed a voluntary bankruptcy petition Jan. 7, has debts estimated as high as $37 million.

He is free on $125,000 bond under federal and state charges of selling unregistered securities. The bankruptcy referee gave Sandblom 10 days in which to file briefs before making a ruling on the car and horses.

Tax Pamphlet Strikes One Sour Note

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP)—No one has ever been known to break out laughing while preparing his income tax, but the Internal Revenue Service likes to pretend things aren't all that dreary.

So this year, that handy but terribly dull pamphlet, "Your Federal Income Tax," was spruced up with sketches.

You could almost sense a note of accomplishment all the way up to Commissioner Mortimer M. Caplin.

But an illustration accompanying an explanation of "oil, gas and mineral depletion," struck a sour note.

Depicted is a ranch-style house, oil derricks off in the distance, curved swimming pools and girls in bathing suits front and center.

Minor S. Jameson Jr., executive vice president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, wrote Caplin the implication is clear "that the affluent life with private swimming pools is made possible, apparently exclusively, by the depletion provisions in the tax laws."

"Propaganda," said Jameson. "We see no justification for you to relate swimming pools and bikinis to oil and gas wells."

Oil country newspapers joined the protest. So did Sen. John Tower, R-Tex.

Caplin insisted he is innocent. The picture was intended only "to add interest and readability to the text," he wrote Jameson, not as "propaganda against the oil and gas depletion provisions."

But the nation's No. 1 tax collector isn't in the kind of job that collects friends. So Caplin also thought it best to advise Jameson that "the illustration which you find objectionable will not be used in the future."

The next time you have grapefruit, wash off the seeds and plant them in shallow bowls for some household greenery.

Armed Forces News

By STEVE TILLMAN

By STEVE TILLAN

WASHINGTON — Special to Gazette Telegraph — Acting quickly after Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Curtis LeMay's attack on the Army's Aviation program, President Johnson announced that he was extending LeMay's tour until next February. This move serves to keep the air chief under military control and — so hope the political leaders — the controversial Air Force-Army hassle over aviation out of the 1964 political campaign.

The news of the extension of the tour was one of the biggest surprises of the year. No one expected this to happen since LeMay has been out of step with Defense Secretary McNamara from the beginning. Washington press corps had been tipped that General LeMay would be the 1964 speaker at the Air Force Academy's graduation exercises and that his remarks could make page 1. It is now expected that his remarks will be tame.

Word among top level civilian officials at the Pentagon is that if Gen. LeMay should "get out of step at any time this year he will be summarily sent into retirement."

It is known among Pentagon sources that Secretary McNamara took a dim view of the limited extension of tour Gen LeMay last July.

The names of several top-flight Air Force Generals were on a recommendation list for Chief of Staff and for Vice Chief of Staff. Initially Gen. Jacob Smart was to be the Number one man and General Walter Sweeney Jr. of TAC the Vice Chief. Then, due to a political "error" on the part of one last October, a change was made and it was believed that General Sweeney would be chosen for the top job.

Then the name of Gen. John P McConnell came into the picture, with General Bernard A Schriever of the Air Force Systems Command as the second man on the new team.

Informed sources here insist that the President overruled Secretary McNamara and retained Gen. LeMay for political reasons. For the rest of the year Pentagon speculation will center on the new Vice Chief of Staff. The officer selected will probably be LeMay's replacement. The build up is expected to be centered on Schriever.

Official spokesmen for the Defense Department and the State Department are refusing comment on recently published interviews by newsmen Jim Lucas and Bon Considine with the late Gen. MacArthur. Here at the Army and Navy Club retired high-ranking officers who were close to the General in those days support the views expressed in the interviews.

Informed Pentagon sources believe medical and hospital care for retired military personnel and their dependents will cease within the next few years.

For years this has been considered as a "right" for the retired officers and enlisted men, but the action of the Congress in 1958 in eliminating recomputation of retired pay provided for by law in 1926 has now convinced the Services that Congress can take away any benefit that it wishes.

There are now approximately 150,433 retired officers and their dependents entitled to hospital and medical care at military hospitals on a space available basis. In addition there are 331,695 officers on active duty. Of the 21,247 age 60 or over, retired Reserve officers only about 10 per cent are entitled to hospital care. The rate of the Title 111 retirees is increasing by several hundred a month. There are 415,700 Reserve and National Guard officers who will retire at age 60. None of the foregoing figures include the several hundred retired enlisted men who are also entitled to medical and hospital care.

The recent drive initiated by the Title 111 retired Reserve to secure hospital and medical care for all retired Reservists is understood to be the reason for the Congressional study to be made on the care of the retirees. Informed sources here expect that the Government will come up with an insurance plan to cover hospital and medical care for all retirees.

The Air Force Association announced that it is now making its low cost group-life insurance available to all military grades from basic airman to General. All members on active duty in the National Guard or Ready Reserve are eligible for coverage, according to the association.

In a formal announcement the Association of the U S Army has endorsed — with reservations — the transfer of Civil Defense responsibilities from Department of Defense to the Army. The new "channel of command" for the program will be from Continental Army Command at Ft. Monroe to each of the six Continental Army commands to each of the State Adjutants General. The latter control the National Guard when it is not in Federal service.

The Warrant Officers Association is seeking to have the Comptroller General extend his April 30 deadline on putting into effect the loss of retired pay to certain categories of retired WOs. This is his decision that temporary "warrants" caine under the dual compensation act. The order has been held in obeyance pending the Congressional action on the dual compensation act.

BLASTS SOVIETS

LONDON (AP)—A West European Socialist study group accused the Soviet government today of "an unprecedented campaign against Judaism" that has led to closure of 75 per cent of the synagogues in seven years.

The committee said a year's study showed that Jews in the Soviet Union are subject to severe discrimination.

Rome Has Own 'Vanishing Americans'

By ERNEST SAKLER

ROME (UPI) — The population of Rome is growing rapidly but the "Romans of Rome" are fading away.

"Romans of Rome" is the proud self-description of the people of Trastevere, the old working class district on the right bank of the Tiber south of the Vatican. And there are fewer and fewer of them—perhaps less than 30,000 now—while the population of Rome is approaching the 2.5 million mark.

The explanation is simple: with comfortable modern buildings springing up all around the old city, the Trasteverini, practical and unromantic people, see no special reason why they should go on living in dark, damp, unheated houses a few centuries old. Especially since the old apartments can be profitably sold as office space or rented to atmosphere-loving Americans who modernize the interiors without touching the picturesque outside walls.

As a result, Trastevere, like other parts of Old Rome, is turning more and more into a show window—a place where you go to eat in a characteristic restaurant, shop or sightsee, but where you do not live.

No one really knows that the population of Trastevere — then called "Trans Tiberim" — was in the days of Augustus or Nero, when all Rome totaled an estimated 1 million inhabitants. But the Trasteverini then certainly were a sizable share of the Romans and remained so through the Middle Ages, when wars and malaria whittled the population of Rome to a low of 50,000 in the sixth century. After the sack of Rome in 1527 the population fell to about 30,000.

A Papal census in 1621 showed the population back to 118,000 Romans, but of these only 11,000 were Trasteverini. When Italy took over Rome in 1870, the overall population had grown to 210,000, of whom 16,000 were Trasteverini.

At the end of 1963, Romans numbered about 2.4 million. Of these only about 30,000 were Trasteverini. This year, the population of Rome is likely to grow by another 100,000 and Trasteverini are likely to decrease further.

Probably the most illustrious living son of Trastevere is Alfredo Cardinal Ottaviani, the baker's son who became Secretary of the Supreme Sacred Congregation of the Holy Office. Also from Trastevere is Pietro Cardinal Ciriaci, whose mother was a fruit vendor.

MURDER TRIAL POSTPONED

DENVER (UPI)—A one-week postponement was granted Tuesday to Joseph Dugard, 70, accused of setting fire to his home last year in which his wife, Betty, 53 died. Dist. Judge Sherman Finesilver postponed the murder trial to April 21 to allow a new jury panel to be selected. Dugard also faces arson charges in the Jan. 10 incident.

DEADLINE NEAR

DENVER (UPI)— Regional officials of the Internal Revenue Service said Tuesday 250,000 Coloradans still must file their 1963 federal income tax returns by midnight tonight. Lawrence E. Hill, the assistant district director, said only 60 per cent of Colorado's taxpayers had filed. About 660,000 persons must file.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government. Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is self-control, no more, no less. It must be consistent with the truths expressed in such great moral guides as the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence.

Based on the Bible

We are the recipient of a jeremiad from the pen of theologian John E. Kreiser.

Like Josephine Hays, who preceded him on these pages, Mr. Kreiser is depressed by what he views as the universal evil of all men. But since Mr. Kreiser, like Miss Hays, is content to argue from the scriptures, we will presume to do the same.

His argument, beginning in the second paragraph, does not relate to the universality of evil, it merely attests to a universality. But beginning in the third paragraph, Mr. Kreiser bases his entire difference from our point of view, on his own rather special interpretation of the Bible.

Let us, therefore, begin with his third paragraph, which states that because of the evil in people prior to the days of the flood, God decided to destory the human race. He found only Noah and the seven members of the family good enough to preserve.

We must, we believe, assume at this point that God is almighty and all knowing. Since God is the author of creation, it would follow that whatever was created was made in the "image and likeness" of God. The Bible states in several places that man has been created in the image and likeness of God.

But now, we learn that apparently God, who knows all things in advance, didn't seem to be able to predict the outcome of His experiment in creating man, and therefore, when He found man to be evil, He destroyed His whole experiment with the exception of Noah and the immediate family of Noah.

But let us take that at face value. If evil men were all destroyed, in spite of the open question as to whether or not God would knowingly create evil, then what is Mr. Kreiser worried about? Since all of us must be the descendants of Noah, it would follow that all of us are descendants of a family that was worthy of survival. If Biblical heredity charts have merit, all of us must be, somehow, carrying the strains of Noah's goodness.

Next, Mr. Kreiser brings in the story of Lot and his family. And he reminds us that God destroyed the whole city of Sodom, and does not remind us, meanwhile, that God was so merciful that when Mrs. Lot turned around to take one last look at the scene of her girlhood, God turned her into a pillar of salt.

But what has this story to do with the universal evil of men? Sodom was only one small town. And even in it there were some worthy of salvation.

Also, there were plenty of other towns flourishing at the time of Sodom's destruction. So, God, rather than being universally incensed again, was locally incensed.

If all men are equally evil, it would seem that Mr. Kreiser would have preferred that God destroy all of humanity, including Mr. Kreiser's ancestors, who doubtless were as evil as any. Apparently God's view of man and Mr. Kreiser's view of man at the time of the destruction of Sodom are somewhat different. For, granting the Almighty's ability to bring on a universal flood any time it pleases Him, why not a second flood to do away with the human experiment altogether?

Next, Mr. Kreiser views the "inclinations" of people in stores where magazine and book racks are available. He implies that, if people pick up books that he wouldn't pick up, the people must be depraved and that his illustration proves it.

But God created man with a universal curiosity. And it isn't possible to know what is in a book or a magazine until it is picked up, opened and examined.

In fact, how does Mr. Kreiser know what is in these books which he disparages? Since he obviously wouldn't be caught taking a peek, it is clear that he doesn't know except on the grounds of what someone else has told him.

Publishers of pornography have often commented that they sell much of their material to people who are engaged in crusades against what they publish. So, apparently, curiosity is not denied them, either, although it may be lacking with Mr. Kreiser.

Rules

Each child thinks of himself as a glorious exception to every rule. Each adult knows that rules that have meaning have no exceptions.

Various Interpretations

We are in the midst of reviewing the comments of John Kreiser, who views man as universally evil and uses the Bible as his single source of reference.

He says in his sixth paragraph in today's letter that if thousands of angels were to be sent from Heaven to build a city, then we wouldn't have this universal evil.

But, according to the Bible, the earth and everything in it was created by the Lord God. This is surely the equivalent of having thousands of angels perform the task.

Jeremiah and Isaiah were distinguished prophets but their views were those of human beings, and hence were subject to error. Indeed, by the argument of Mr. Kreiser, Jeremiah and Isaiah were both wicked men, for evil is universal. Therefore, there is no more reason for believing them when they lament on evil than to believe them under other circumstances. Since they are human and hence evil, we may dismiss their views as being no more than opinion.

In the following paragraph, Mr. Kreiser is on better ground. Here he quotes Jesus in the New Testament. But Jesus does not say that the conditions He has observed among people are universal. He simply points out that the items He enumerates proceed from evil thoughts. Indeed, they do.

The fact that we contend that man is basically good, does not deny the fact that man is also fallible. Indeed, we have reiterated that idea many times.

Mr. Kreiser again quotes Jesus in respect to the idea of being born again. Now this phrase, to be born again, has a long history in metaphysical reasoning and means many things to many different people.

The Egyptians believed that after a man's Ka (soul) was examined by the God Maat, he would be found worthy or unworthy. If worthy, he would be "born again." That is, he would make his way into an eternal paradise to live forever. If he failed in this examination, he would experience the "second death."

Osiris, the Egyptian god of the underworld, was supposed to die each autumn and be "born again" each spring.

Eastern philosophies and theologies including the Buddhist and Brahman faiths as well as the Vedanta, believe in reincarnation or re-embodiment and contend that man is re-born in the physical world. They often contend that Jesus was the re-incarnation of Joshua. This is, of course, a literal interpretation of "born again."

In any case, we see no justification in the quotation for supposing that Jesus believed that man was universally evil. Clearly, He must have believed in a second birth of some kind. Obviously, the unworthy would not be "born again." It is apparent that all men could not be universally evil or none would be worthy of this second opportunity.

Now, we certainly agree with our critic about things acting according to their own nature. But what we have not determined is what that nature is.

The quotations used by Mr. Kreiser fail to establish the point. And observation demonstrates conclusively that Mr. Kreiser and others who seek to support their own unique interpretations of scriptures, are nobly motivated. However in error they may be, their basic natures are good.

If we may believe Mr. Kreiser's second paragraph, which insists that all men are the same and have the same nature, then we must insist that all men are as good as Mr. Kreiser. And we are rather thoroughly convinced that Mr. Kreiser believes he is doing right and seeking to do right.

We are not concerned with insults against humanity. We are concerned with trying to come to grips with facts. If, as is argued, man can find a solution to his problems through Christ, why should he want to do so, unless he is motivated to seek the good?

Mr. Kreiser's position is self-contradictory and defeats itself. If we are to stand on Biblical grounds, we will contend that the Bible demonstrates that God is good; that Jesus, His son, is good; that God made the world and saw that it was good; that man, therefore, is good. That God, if the very embodiment of goodness, could not and would not create evil. If man is evil, then God could not have created him, since like creates like throughout the universe.

But if God has erred in making man, God has had plenty of time and opportunity to destroy man (the flood, Sodom and Gomorrah, etc., etc.), but on the contrary there are more people on earth now than ever before in history.

It is said that God so loved the world that He sent His only begotten son to live among the men of this earth. If the men of this earth are basically evil, how could God love them, since God, being all good, could not love evil?

We prefer to discuss this question on the basis of physical evidence and logic. But since some of our readers seem intent on introducing the scriptures as though their particular interpretation was the only valid one, we thought it might serve the cause of truth and honest reflection to show that based on the scriptures other interpretations can also be drawn.

Reporters Don't Lie

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

The veracity and taste of reporters who took notes on conversations with General MacArthur ten years ago for subsequent release to posterity have been called into question. But the reporters don't need to worry about corroboration, for others besides themselves heard MacArthur outline his views on men and events, though not necessarily for authorized direct quotation at any time.

Does it come as a complete surprise to the current reading public that MacArthur suspected that somebody was tipping western decisions in the Korean War to the Red Chinese? Or that he had suggested using atomic materials and bombs to end the war against the Chinese and North Koreans? Or that he considered officials in Washington, both military and political, to be "fools" and "timid men"?

The fact is that MacArthur was only discreet in his stipulations that he must not be quoted directly without authorization. I know this because of the limitations which he put upon General Charles A. Willoughby when the forceful and competent G-2 officer who was with him from the Philippines all the way to Korea was making a book out of papers from the MacArthur intelligence files. Some of the indirect reflections of MacArthur's thinking which Willoughby was permitted to use are extremely revealing today, and they back up the recently published revelations of reporters Jim Lucas and Bob Considine.

EDITED

Eleven years ago General Willoughby outlined MacArthur's proposal for finishing off the Chinese Communists in North Korea. "For psychological as well as other reasons," so Willoughby wrote, "MacArthur proposed by constant thrusts to regain the Seoul line for a base of operation from which to clear North Korea of enemy forces. This could be accomplished through the air destruction of enemy concentration and installations, the closing of major lines of enemy supply and communication through the sowing of defensive fields of suitable radioactive materials available as by-products of atomic manufacture . . ."

The important thing about this revelation that MacArthur was considering the use of radioactive material is not that Willoughby wrote it, but that MacArthur passed upon it, as he did in the case of every other word in the Willoughby book. I know about MacArthur's "editing," for as Willoughby's collaborator I was sometimes blue-pencilled.

As for the Red Chinese access to western diplomatic and military decisions, Willoughby quoted some staff notes set down after MacArthur's Wake Island meeting with President Truman. "How little did MacArthur realize," so that quotation reads, "that by one process or another it would be conveyed to the Red Chinese that even though they entered the fray in large forces, it would be under the sanctuary of being immune from any destructive action . . . that not even to save lives of our men or insure the safety of our Army would we permit the Air Force to drop the atom bomb on military targets . . . that the Red Chinese commander apparently knew such a decision would be forthcoming while General MacArthur did not, represents one of the blackest pages ever recorded."

OKAYED

General MacArthur read that and okayed it for publication, too. He was convinced that the Red Chinese entered the war because they knew it would be fought on their terms.

The "fools" and "timid men" in Washington almost prevented MacArthur from undertaking the amphibious operation at Inchon, which flanked the North Koreans and kept the U. N. forces from being pushed out of South Korea entirely. The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Omar Bradley, has said that amphibious operations were obsolete, and, according to Willoughby's statement, which MacArthur passed, "The chief of staff, General Collins, and the chief of naval operations, Admiral Sherman, had flown on a special mission to Tokyo for the express purpose of persuading MacArthur against this operation."

Thus, though controversies will probably continue about the exact shading of certain pungent expressions attributed to MacArthur, the history that is written by participants and by historians will back up the reporters. Our journalists may err at times by taking sides in political fights, but they do not make things up out of whole cloth.

Question Box

(We invite questions on economics and the proper functions of government which will not injure anyone.)

Question No. 480: "How do you define Anarchism? — and how does this theory compare with the views regarding abolition of tax-supported governmental agencies?

"The agencies, under attack, are too numerous to list; and those that have not been mentioned could not survive alone.

"Readers of this paper are well aware of the theoretical solution — so let's dismiss this area for the purpose of this question and answer."

Answer: Anarchism is a theory of life and conduct under which society is conceived without government. It, however, is associated with socialism and opposition to the rights of individuals to own property privately.

The anarchists almost without exception, starting with Proudhon, have sought to eliminate government because they contended governments were established to protect private property, and they would first eliminate government to destroy individuals' rights to own property.

While many anarchists have said they would not use force to achieve their aims, in practice they have joined with other socialists in building the power of the state to gain their primary objective — the destruction of private property.

The Gazette Telegraph's view is that force should not be initiated even to attain the objectives of eliminating tax-financed government agencies. We have advocated refusal to use, where possible, all government functions, but would not use any force to compel others to do as we do. We will not sanction aggressive force under any circumstances, even to obtain objectives we believe are worthwhile.

Our idea of proper government services is those services which individuals will support voluntarily without compelling others to support them.

Questions are limited to general human relations questions that will improve the well-being of all mankind on this earth.

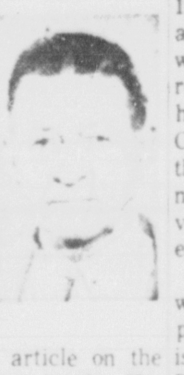
The Local Scene

The Homestake Water Project

By RUFUS L. PORTER



Although I do not believe the city government, or any government, has any business in the water business, I do believe it is good news to know that Colorado Springs and its environs are going to have enough water to keep pace with future progress and development.

An interesting article on the Homestake project in the Engineering News-Record of February 27, 1964, has been called to my attention. It describes in detail the joint efforts of Colorado Springs and Aurora in obtaining water rights and developing the project.

It seems that in 1952 John P. Elliot, who was surveying in the Homestake area, filed claim to the rights on the excess runoff from the creeks in that region. This applies only to excess water after all prior claims have been satisfied. Elliot then formed the "Suburban Water Users Association" to develop his rights.

In 1956 Aurora and Colorado Springs each bought one-third of Elliot's rights. In 1959 an adverse decision in a district court made this purchase look like a pig in a poke for a while. The court ruled against diversion of water from the Western Slope to the Eastern one. But the Colorado Supreme Court reversed that decision on November 2, 1961, thus opening the way for action by the two cities.

About that time Elliot and Boettcher and Company of Denver, who still held a third interest in the water rights, offered it for sale and the Springs and Aurora bought it, giving them all of the original rights filed on by Elliot. According to the Engineering News-Record these rights cost the cities about $680,000 each. The water is to be divided equally between the two towns, which, when the total project is completed, will give each town about 37,000 acre feet of water per year. Colorado Springs will eventually receive another 10,000 acre feet per year on the completion of the Fryingpan-Arkansas transmountain diversion project, states the article.

Construction of the Homestake dam is to be started this spring and it is expected to be in partial use by May, 1966, and to be completed by May, 1968. The dam will be an earth and rock fill structure, faced with impermeable asphalt. The reservoir, when completed, will hold the runoff from Homestake Creek and five other creeks in the area. A 5.5 mile tunnel is now being driven under the divide to carry the water to the east side.

A second collection system will carry runoff from the Upper Eagle River through an existing tunnel under Tennessee Pass. The diverted water will be stored in an enlarged Twin Lakes on this side of the Continental Divide, from where it will flow by canal to the Ortero pumping station to be pumped through 20 miles of pipe line and a tunnel under Trout Creek Pass. From Trout Creek Pass the water will be carried by a 30-mile pipe line to a point above Denver's Eleven Mile Canyon Dam. From there Colorado Springs' share will flow 26 miles farther through a 45-inch line and a 1.2 mile tunnel under the Rampart Range into the Monument No. 5 reservoir, which is connected with the city's water system. Aurora's share will travel down the South Platte River and will be pumped from there into storage reservoirs.

Aurora, which has been buying two thirds of its water from Denver, expects to have water to sell to others when the project is finished. And no doubt Colorado Springs also plans to sell its excess water to surrounding towns. These will probably include the Ute Pass area, which has been considerably worried about water recently. A filtration plant at Woodland Park would seem to be in the offing. But this is just a guess.

No wonder the city fathers are busy, they have so many businesses to look after. Businesses that should have been left to free enterprise which would have been away ahead of the city government in anticipating the present and future water needs of the region and at lower cost. The cost to Colorado Springs taxpayers will run about 27 million and to Aurora 21 million for the project. But it is good to know that water will cease, for a time at least, to be a major worry to the community.

Allen-Scott Report

Grand Jury May Probe Bobby Baker

ROBERT ALLEN

PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Robert Kennedy is facing what could be the most critical decision of his career — whether to authorize the convening of a grand jury to consider charges against "Bobby" Baker.

Assistant Attorney General Herbert Miller, head of the Criminal Division, has indicated he will be ready to present such a case around mid-May.

Justice Department insiders credit Miller as favoring taking such action. But before he can proceed, it will be necessary for him — in the highly politics-charged Baker affair — to get the approval of his boss, the attorney general.

With no formal recommendations yet before him, Kennedy is portrayed as having "an open mind" on initiating legal action against the one-time influential $19,500-a-year secretary of the Senate Democrats. But Justice Department authorities are taking it for granted that if Miller advocates grand jury action, Kennedy will okay it.

It has long been an open secret that no love was lost between the young attorney general and the equally youthful Baker.

However, the backstage word is that Deputy Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach is reputedly "dragging his feet." He is said to be counseling a "go slow" policy.

Behind the scenes, the question also is being raised of possible intense White House interest.

Walter Jenkins, among President Johnson's closest assistants and until recently an official of the LBJ (radio-TV) Co., was involved in the stormy Senate investigation of Baker. Republicans made repeated efforts to have Jenkins summoned for direct interrogation, but were voted down by the Democratic majority.

Whether a grand jury probe of Baker would affect Jenkins or others close to the President is not known. But this point is being avidly discussed by politicos in both parties.

Privately apprised of the possible grand jury proceedings, they are intently watching what happens in both the Justice Department and the White House.

Involved in the issue of taking charges against Baker to a special federal grand jury is where that should be done — in the District of Columbia or the adjoining state of Maryland.

The former potent Senate official's activities covered both jurisdictions, and a decision would have to be made where to proceed against him.

Another potential problem is the report of the Senate investigating committee. This is now slated for some time in May, and is certain to be as furiously partisan as the probe has been.

The six Democratic committeemen will have a so-called majority report, and the three Republicans will have their own report. The two are certain to differ widely — with the Democrats soft-pedaling, and the Republicans castigating and excoriating right to the doorstep of the White House.

What effect, if any, these clashing findings would have on a grand jury investigation is conjectural. They are sure to have loud political impact.

Also still to be heard from are two other potentially decisive forces.

One is the Internal Revenue Service, which is probing Baker's tax returns. It is understood the IRS expects to submit its findings to the Justice Department in a few weeks, in ample time for Assistant Attorney General Miller to consider them in making his recommendation to the attorney general.

The other factor is Senator John Williams, R-Del., the veteran "one - man investigating committee," who precipitated the Baker investigation.

Williams is telling colleagues he has considerably more to say about the Baker case, and will make a series of Senate speeches. He will also make public correspondence he has had with various government agencies on the matter.

GOOD VS. EVIL

To the Editor:

In a recent editorial, "Is Man Basically Good?", you seek to convince Josephine Hays with what you regard as overwhelming evidence that man "is" basically good.

I have a number of missionary friends that were raised in this society with centuries of religious culture for a background and yet their children manifest the identical traits of character and reveal an identical number of evidences that the inherited nature of all children is the same.

The people, except for Noah and seven members of his family, were destroyed because as the Scriptures tell us, God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually.

Lot and his family were told to leave the city of Sodom because of the wickedness there. When sin takes a drastic hold on a society, the disease and sickness are so prevalent, the innocent babies so much the victims, that we can see why a merciful God would destroy such a culture.

Regarding the inclinations of people we see plenty of evidence of the age in our everyday life. Walk into a drug store or bus station and see what kind of books are selling. Place a Bible with other books on a table and see the reaction.

If thousands of angels were sent from Heaven to set up a city on this earth, such things as corrupt movies, sex books, beer joints, and a lot of other harmful things would not exist because their natures would not permit it. Neither would their intelligence permit it.

The Hebrew prophets recognized man's nature as sinful. Jeremiah wrote, "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked: who can know it" (Jer. 17:9). Isaiah wrote, "But we are all as an unclean thing, and all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags" (Isa. 64:6).

In the New Testament the Lord Jesus said, "For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies" (Matt. 15:19). Then He told a very religious and educated man in John 3:3, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."

Everything in life acts according to its own nature. The dog acts like a dog because of its nature. Birds act like birds because of their nature. Angels act like angels because of their nature. There are both good and evil angels. Satan acts like Satan because of his nature. Man acts like a man because of his nature and needs a new nature to act like Christ wants us to act.

When the Christian states that man is basically bad, it is not any more of an insult than when a dentist tells us we have a decayed tooth or when a doctor tells us we have a bad heart. It is simply a statement of truth supported by Scripture and a world-full of evidence. Man cannot lift himself into Heaven by pulling himself up by his own boot straps any easier than a leopard can change his spots or a man can change the color of his skin.

Christ has diagnosed our problem and offered Himself as our solution.

FROM EIGHT TO EIGHTY

To the Editor:

Someone was thinking out loud the other day when he said, "It looks like you have a lot of pleasure riding a bicycle." To which an eighty-two-year-old man replied, "It is pleasure plus much more. It is recreation affording change of scenery; it makes possible contacts with friends and strangers as in no other way; it takes you places with the least effort and is strengthening to your heart, lungs and muscles without strain."

When this gentleman of more than three score years and twenty said this, his face beamed with a radiance of youthfulness. Few know how much real wealth and health we Americans are denying ourselves by relegating the bicycle to a child's plaything. We all know that automobiles crowded out the bicycle as a means of transportation beginning the early part of the present century. However, the bicycle is an invention that stands supreme in making it possible for all ages of men and women to maintain a standard of balanced living and a desirable pleasure that gives real satisfaction. As an aid to beauty in women and to self-control in men, bicycling has no equal. The value of bicycling is gradually being recognized by many more of us car-riding Americans.

If you have not learned to ride one, now is the time to start. The best five or ten-speed bicycle costs between sixty and seventy dollars and, with proper care it will last a lifetime.

Which Minute Portion of Freedom?

By GEORGE BOARDMAN, PhD

The study of individualism provides many interesting questions. In the midst of a growing understanding of the individualistic nature of separate human beings, a few doubts appear when dozens of people living in different parts of the world make almost identical statements.

For instance, "As part of a society we have to yield a minute portion of our freedom or natural rights in order to protect the balance." Ten years ago I received a letter from a college student living in Switzerland who made that statement in an effort to prove my belief in the philosophy of freedom rested on a weak foundation. Since that time I have probably read or listened to the same statement at least a hundred times a year and just today I read the same thing in a letter from a man who presented it as an irrefutable fact.

In turn, I have asked "which minute portion of my freedom do you expect me to yield?" My question brought answers which indicated to me that those who make the statement rarely, if ever, understand what they are writing or saying. It has done nothing to dilute my contention that freedom is indivisible, but let's look at it anyway.

I can find no evidence which leads me to believe I can protect my freedom by yielding some minute portion of my freedom, if such a thing is possible. If I put out one hand for a chain, the strength of my hand is immediately reduced by the weight of that one chain. If I accept that first chain, the reason for accepting that first chain remains valid for each additional restraint which may be placed upon me.

Which minute portion of your right to your life will you yield? Which minute portion of your right to own property will you yield?

Sure, I know a few of the answers. I will yield 10 per cent of my money in order to preserve 90 per cent. Okay, that's your privilege, but how does yielding 10 per cent protect the 90 per cent? Well, the man said he'd leave me alone if I agree to let him take 10 per cent and after all, this will protect my 90 per cent. But look, if you don't agree to let him take 90 per cent, you will not be able to keep your 10 per cent and isn't 10 per cent better than nothing?

Let's see now, government told you it could protect your right to marry by permitting you to marry. The cost of a license will be small — only a few dollars. Yield a small portion of your freedom to marry to protect your freedom to marry and by so doing, you yield your right to marry, absolutely. At any minute, the agency which gives you a license to marry can refuse to give you the license.

The State of California permits a retail merchant to go into business provided the merchant is willing to be enslaved as an unpaid tax collector for the state — just yield a minute portion of freedom. It may seem like a minute portion to you but the truth of the matter is that your right to operate your own business is gone. Your right to privacy of your person and papers is gone. What minute portion of freedom?

Surely, giving up two years of your life to protect your freedom is a small price to pay but what if they are the last two years of your life and how does yielding a minute portion of your freedom guarantee your freedom? Of course if you are a fatalist, you have nothing to worry about since you are then an absolute slave to fate.

Oh yes, if I don't complain when government steals from me, the force of government will protect my life and property. On a money-back guarantee? How much faith does an insurance company have in this protection when it exempts enemy action, war and insurrection from many forms of insurance?

Without reservation I accept the definition of freedom which is "the absence of restraint by others." Obviously, I am among the others when anybody else accepts this definition and I hope you will examine the full meaning of the definition which provides the key to self-government.

Good luck and good health to you, in Freedom.

Castro Is Sold By Nikita on Slow Terror

By LEON DENNEN

NEW YORK (NEA) — According to Allen Dulles, the non-Communist nations have no policy to meet the challenge of Red subversion in the undeveloped countries.

This is a disturbing admission by the former chief of the Central Intelligence Agency. Communism has been a daily threat to western society for close to 50 years. Yet it is tragically true, as Dulles asserted in a recent speech that the Free World, the CIA included, has found no effective antidote to Red terrorism and subversion.

Latin America is the latest case in point. President Johnson, in his effort to chart a new course for the Western Hemisphere, is trying to revitalize the Alliance for Progress. Yet the alliance, it is clear, will remain a dead letter as long as Latin America is in the grip of Fidel Castro's terror.

Specialists on communism, in fact, have noted the emergence of a new and subtler Red strategy in most countries below the Rio Grande since Castro's recent visit to Russia.

Premier Khruschev seems to have shelved, for the present at least, Castro's plan to subvert established governments and promote Red regimes patterned on Cuba's dictatorship. Instead of frontal attacks, Moscow's new policy concentrates on limited acts of terrorism designed to keep Latin America in a permanent state of political and economic chaos.

This is especially evident in Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Panama and Venezuela.

According to reports at the United Nations, Fidel Castro, since his return from Russia, has launched a new drive to recruit young Latin Americans for his school of terrorism. Dubbed the "Academy of Terror" by the recruits, the school is located at Minas del Frio, a village in the Sierra Maestra mountains. It is from these mountains that Cuba's dictator launched his own successful revolution.

About 10,000 young men and women from various parts of the Western Hemisphere are already reported to be training at Minas del Frio. Courses include instruction in the use of light weapons, the manufacture of home weapons and how to commit acts of terrorism and sabotage singly or in small groups.

Some of the recruits for the academy of terror reach Cuba by air from Mexico City. But the majority are believed to be transported in Russian and Cuban ships or in small boats from nearby Central America.

Graduates of the academy, before they return to their native countries, are supplied with money, propaganda material and small arms. They also receive quantities of arms shipped through commercial airlines, in the baggage of Cuban diplomats or in small boats which cross from Cuba at night to the Yucatan Peninsula of Mexico and then down the shoreline of Central America.

A regular route in contraband arms is also known to run from Brazil through Bolivia and into Peru.

Latest Red strategy in Latin America, in the view of specialists on communism, is a victory for Premier Khrushchev's go-slow policy over Red China's revolutionary brinkmanship. Its immediate aim is to make shambles of President Johnson's efforts to stimulate economic development and social progress in Latin America.

It costs the Russians $1 million a day to keep Fidel Castro in power. Plagued by their own economic and political troubles they are obviously not interested at present in encouraging Red revolutions which might jeopardize their trade with the West and bring them into open conflict with the United States.

Premier Khrushchev aims to achieve through a permanent terror which breeds fear, economic instability and chaos what Mao Tse-tung seeks to gain through "direct revolutionary action."

BERLE IN HOSPITAL

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Milton Berle was under treatment today for what the comedian's wife described as a possible bleeding ulcer condition.

Berle, 55, entered Cedars of Lebanon Hospital Tuesday. Hospital spokesmen said that Berle's condition was not considered serious and that tests would be taken to determine the exact nature of his ailment.

Tide of Civil Rights Mail Said Turning

WASHINGTON (AP)—Americans who want the civil rights bill to become law are writing their senators in greater numbers while many of those who oppose it continue to aim a steady stream of letters at the Capitol.

But northern senators report the tide has turned after a late-winter flood of protest mail.

That was the consensus today among a cross-section of northern senators. Southerners report no change: their mail reflects all but unanimous opposition to the House-passed measure now being debated by the Senate.

But Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., whose mail was running about 4 to 1 against the measure said favorable letters are on top now. An aide to Scott said supporters of the legislation apparently started writing when they heard that opposition mail was flooding the Capitol.

He said much of the opposition reflects the program of the coordinating committee for Fundamental American Freedoms Inc., an organization with Mississippi financial backing.

Scott's office said the mail between April 6 and April 10 brought 677 letters favoring the bill and 466 against it. During the last five days of February, the senator got 111 letters favoring the bill and 413 opposing it.

Sen. Clair Engle, D-Calif., reported a similar shift. For the six weeks ended last Friday, his office said, the mail was 85 per cent against the bill. But this week, with volume up to 400 letters a day, a little over 50 per cent of the mail is for it.

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., said he's getting 20 to 30 letters a day, about evenly split after a late-winter deluge that ran 5 to 1 for the opposition.

Sen. Frank Carlson, R-Kan., reported the mail running about even—with about 1,000 letters a day pouring in. His office said the wintertime count was about 10 to 1 in opposition to the bill.

Some northern senators, among them Republicans Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois and Bourke Hickenlooper of Iowa and Democrat Paul H. Douglas of Illinois, said their mail still is running against the measure.

Dirksen's office said the volume is heavy—and about 9 to 1 against.

Mississippi Democrats James O. Eastland and John Stennis said their mail is heavy and virtually solid in its opposition to the bill.

Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, R-N.Y., said his mail was 5 to 2 against the bill early in March. He took the Senate floor with a speech about Southern propaganda efforts on March 14—and the following week the mail shifted to run about even. His office said the ratio now is about 3 to 2 in favor.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, Keating's New York colleague, reported a similar shift. Javits' office said 2,008 letters favoring the bill and 887 opposed to it arrived during the first two weeks of April. An aide said the tide turned during the last two weeks of March.

Other senators had these reports:

Sen. Joseph S. Clark, D-Pa., between 200 and 300 letters a day, about 5 to 1 in favor of the bill. A month ago, his count was 3 to 1 against the measure.

Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel, R-Calif., 150-200 letters a day, split about even. It had been running 4 to 1 in opposition.

Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., 150-200 letters a day, 3 to 1 for the bill, after running 3 to 1 against it a month ago.

Sen. John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., about 10 letters a day, 95 per cent of them opposing the bill.

Sen. Thruston B. Morton, R-Ky., no figure on volume, but the letters are fairly well divided in sentiment.

Baby Sitter Dials With Her Big Toe

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—A baby sitter dialed O with her big toe and reported an attempted robbery Wednesday after she had been left bound to a bed post and gagged.

Mary Gibson, 21, said a man ransacked the house. When he left, she pulled the telephone to her side with her feet, kicked the received off the hook and dialed the operator with her toe.

The operator understood her mumblings and summoned police.

A check of the house showed nothing missing.

The Florissant Grange will hold a benefit chili supper, April 25 at 6:30, at the Grange Hall with games and prizes as entertainment. Profits will be sent to the National Grange at Alaska to aid the earthquake victims. The Grange held its regular monthly meeting April 7 with a pot luck supper and Mrs. Zane Rarper as hostess. Vocal numbers were presented by Mike and Marilyn Mathewes as part of the evening's program.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Parmley of Divide and Mrs. Luke Madole and Mrs. Dorothy Erb attended the postmasters meeting in Fairplay.

April, capricious as always, has ushered in an intermingling of spring and winter. A severe windstorm Sunday kept residents indoors. The Badger Flats Road has been nearly impassable, a real ordeal to the school bus driver and mail carrier with its mud and deep ruts. The Blue Mountain Road has been in bad shape, also.

The Forest Service crew, idle during the winter months, has been called back to work, commencing last Monday. The present project is burning the beetle infested trees in the area.

Members of the Republican's Women Club attending the April meeting last Tuesday at the Tubling River Ranch at Bailey from here were Mrs. Frank Gordan, Mrs. Leigh Reeves, Mrs. Emil Warling, Mrs. Ben Garver and the club president, Mrs. Wilbur Lewis. An informative and interesting talk, appreciated by all present, was given by Harold McCormick of Canon City, a member of the state legislature.

Hiram Curtis, pioneer homesteader of this area died in Colorado Springs, April 4 at the age of 89. Mr. Crutis homesteaded the ranch now owned by the Ernest Orcutts, and lived all his life hereabouts. He is survived by his widow, seven sons and other relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Miller of Jefferson called on Lake George friends Wednesday. They report hearing unusual noises one early morning and seeing their yard filled with elk. It's a thrilling sight to see elk herds on Kenosha Pass, antelope in South Park, herds of deer throughout the region, and if you are lucky the famed mountain sheep of Tarryall! Fortunate we are to have wild life at our doorsteps!

Mrs. Ray Landis attended the annual conference of Rocky Mountain Region Soroptimist Club, with a number of western states represented, at Broadmoor Hotel last week. The program featured tours of Air Force Academy and NORAD.

Parents and friends were treated to a repeat performance of the musical program of Lake George elementary music students, directed by Mrs. Zane Harper and assisted by Mrs. Earl Fyler, Saturday evening. Guests were served refreshments.

Latins Continue Development Despite Castro

By WARD CANNEL

WASHINGTON (NEA)—With official Washington erupting in a feverish reappraisal of our foreign policy, it may at last be possible to break our hypnotic fix on Fidel Castro and take a real look at U.S. relations in the rest of this hemisphere.

For example:

Venezuela, our staunchest, richest ally in the hemisphere, has still to contend with thousands of Fidel-inspired bomb-throwing, gun - toting subversives clamoring for equal distribution of the wealth.

Yet, at the same time, 120 leading Venezuelan and U.S. companies there have pledged 2 to 5 per cent of their net earnings for social and welfare programs in such areas as education, housing, nutrition and juvenile delinquency. This voluntary fund is expected to total about $70 million within the next three years.

Central America gave an unofficial but very obvious nod of congratulations to Panama in her adamant demand to renegotiate the Canal Treaty, even if it came to riot and bloodshed.

On the other hand, some 20,000 children in El Salvador are starting to attend school for the first time—schools built by the people themselves under technical and financial aid by the Alliance for Progress.

And Costa Rica is presently completing a new power plant under the guidance and investment of the World Bank, the Inter-American Bank and U.S. Agency for International Development. The new plant will boost by 40 per cent the electricity available to two-thirds of the people.

In Bolivia, dissidents have held American diplomats, businessmen and journalists at gun point to emphasize how they feel about their government and U.S. influence.

Meanwhile, however, town after town in Bolivia's high plains are working with each other, government officials and with U.S. experts to install potable water systems, sewage disposal facilities, health centers and school feeding programs.

In Chile, some of one's best friends can't decide whom they like better: Russia or Red China.

On the other hand, the Pan American Sanitary Bureau has experts working with farmers to vaccinate their cattle against livestock disease; entertainment troupes sent by the United States have Chileans singing American songs; and film distributors have made movie-goers as familiar with New York and Hollywood as they are with Santiago and Valparaiso.

We are getting through in considerable measure. And only by governmental treaty, bank loan, interagency recommendation.

In Schenectady, N.Y. The Rosendale Elementary School PTA has raised $750 to finance concrete block-making equipment for Casa Blanca, Colombia, where townspeople have added their own labor to build a school.

In New Jersey, Local 477 of the International Union of Electrical Workers has a Labor Peace Corps and Development Program for people-to-people work with Latin Americans. The new organization has already helped build a school in Sergipe, Brazil, for the teaching of farming techniques, hygiene and reading and writing.

In New York, David Rockefeller and other businessmen have organized a volunteer Executive Service Corps to provide technical and managerial assistance to private enterprises in developing nations.

And from unofficial Washington comes word that U.S. Peace Corpsmen in Colombia are making the supreme sacrifice (above and beyond the call of duty). In the past year, 24 PCs have been joined in holy matrimony to Colombian belles to make the whole scene: alliance, progress, organization, mutual aid, private economy and public welfare.

HIGHEST TRAFFIC RATE

TOKYO (UPI) — The traffic death rate in Tokyo in 1963 was the highest in the world, according to a study issued today by the traffic department of the metropolitan police agency.

The report said 986 persons died in traffic accidents in Tokyo last year, making a ratio of 9.4 deaths per 100,000 persons. The death toll in the United States last year was three deaths per 100,000 persons, the study said.

SUMMER THEATERS IN 47 STATES

NEW YORK (AP) — Summer theaters are scheduled to operate during the '64 season in all but three states, according to a survey by Back Stage, a trade publication.

Thespian activities are not planned in Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana. Altogether about 280 playhouses will be open. The biggest group is in New York, 32, followed by Pennsylvania, California and Massachusetts with about two dozen each. Ohio lists 15, Illinois 23, New Jersey 12, and Connecticut 10.

Johnson Keeps Many Capital Trips 'Secret'

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidents often complain that they have no privacy. In fact, they have more than you might imagine.

Washington is a sophisticated, cosmopolitan capital where a presidential caravan can be spotted instantly as it rolls along the boulevards.

Still it's a fact that President Johnson, time after time, is driven around the city after dark without reporters, or the general public, being the wiser.

Johnson told newsmen last week he likes to visit friends in suburban Silver Spring, Md., and even as far away as Hyattsville, Md., 15 miles to the northeast. No such trips have been recorded.

A few months ago Johnson drove 12 miles into suburban Virginia to have dinner with Pierre Salinger, then his press secretary. The directions to Salinger's house were so circuitous that the Secret Service had to summon a White House driver who had been there many times to lead the small motorcade. This trip, too, went unrecorded.

Wednesday night, after attending a hotel reception given in his honor by King Hussein of Jordan, Johnson decided to take off on one of these jaunts.

This posed a problem because two reporters had hired a limousine and, with Secret Service knowledge, had joined the presidential motorcade to the hotel. The reporters planned to leave with Johnson and follow him, not so much because they wanted to know where he was going but to be on hand in case his car should have a flat tire, a wreck or other misfortune.

After all, should the President have an accident on the highway, a White House reporter might be hard pressed to explain why he wasn't on the scene.

Well, the Secret Service, acting on Johnson's instructions, solved the problem of the limousine from the Fourth Estate. They ordered two Washington policemen to park their motorcycles so close to the front bumper of the press car that it couldn't join the cavalcade.

Johnson took off for parts unknown, free of pursuit, with Mr. and Mrs. Ed Clark, old friends from Austin, Tex. Clark is an attorney.

Facts about after-dark presidential trips frequently remain very secret—proof enough that the President of the United States can move about in complete secrecy, if that's his desire.

Asian-African Summit Talks Slated Again

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP)—Sixty-two nations will be invited to the second Asian-African summit conference, to be held in Africa next March.

But Malaysia will not be among them unless the dispute with Indonesia is settled. And a proposed invitation to the Soviet Union was left unsettled because of objections raised by Red China at a preliminary meeting which ended Wednesday.

Israel and white-ruled South Africa also were excluded, but both Viet Nams and both Koreas were invited.

The meeting will be held on the 10th anniversary of the first conference, in Bandung, West Java. The site in Africa for the 1965 meeting will be chosen later.

There are now some 159,200,000 telephones in the world.

Five Policemen Die In Congo Disorders

BUKAVU, Kivu Province, the Congo (AP) — Five policemen were killed and a number of civilians injured Wednesday in a raid blamed on African gangs of rebel leader Pierre Mulele.

Rebels armed with lances also attacked the car of Provincial Gov. Pierre Malago when he drove from Bukavu to investigate the violence at the police station at nearby Bagira.

The governor escaped and, using a gun, also rescued his bodyguard, who had been wounded and kidnaped by the Mulele gang.

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP)—Which is the southernmost home in continental United States?

The distinction had long been claimed by Hilario Ramos, Key West businessman.

Then Mrs. Mary de Forest Geary, formerly of Philadelphia, called for a measurement. Her home was given the nod by seven inches.

Now Ramos has built a beach house adjoining his to the south. A question to be decided is whether this counts for southernmost honors.

British Train Robbers Are Sent to Prison

By HAL R. COOPER

AYLESBURY, England (AP)—Judge Edmund Davies sentenced 12 men today to prison terms ranging up to 30 years for their part in Britain's great train robbery.

Seven men were sentenced to prison for 30 years, two for 25, one for 24, one for 20 and one for three years.

The robbery of the Glasgow to London mail train on Aug. 8 netted the gang 2.6 million pounds — $7,680,000 — the greatest cash haul in modern times.

Davies told the men:

"You have been convicted of complicity in a crime that in its enormity is the first of its kind in this country. I propose to do all within my power to ensure that it will also be the last of its kind.

"Your outrageous conduct constitutes an intolerable menace to the well being of society."

Those who drew the 30-year sentences were:

Charles F. Wilson, 31, and Thomas W. Wisbey, 33, London racing bookies; Robert Welch, 34, Longon nightclub owner; James Hussey, 30, London housepainter; Roy James, 28, London silversmith and auto racer; Douglas G. Goody, 34, a London hairdresser; Ronald A. Biggs, 34, a carpenter of Redhill, Surrey.

The others and their sentences were:

Briain Field, 29, a law clerk of Whitchurch Hill, Oxfordshire, and Leonard Field, 31, a London merchant seaman who is not related to the other Field, 25 years; William Boal, 50, a London engineer, 24 years; Roger J. Cordrey, 42, florist of East Molesey, Surrey, 20 years; John D. Wheater, 41, lawyer and former British army major of Ashtead, Surrey, 3 years.

The big robbery occurred at a nearby hamlet when about 15 men stopped the mail train with a false red signal and overpowered clerks in the car carrying most of the money.

Most of the cash was in five pounds ($14) notes being transferred from branch banks in Scotland to London.

The police have recovered only about 300,000 pounds ($840,000). They think the rest has been cached away by three or four men, so far uncaught, who masterminded the theft.

Still to be tried before Judge Davies are six persons, including three women, accused of receiving portions of the loot.

Sen. Williams to Seek Fourth Term

GEORGETOWN, Del. (AP)—Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., whose disclosures touched off several Senate investigations including the Bobby Baker probe, announced Wednesday night he will run for a fourth term in November "if the people want me."

Williams made the announcement after a resolution urging his candidacy was presented by the Sussex County Republican Committee at a meeting.

No Democrat has announced against Williams. But some political observers think Gov. Elberg N. Carvel will run.

SOBBING SHERIFF

WILLIAMSTOWN, Ky. (AP)—A ride in the courthouse elevator proved a tearful experience for the sheriff and his deputy.

They entered the elevator on the fourth floor to go to the basement. As the sheriff pushed the button, he accidentally fired his tear gas gun.

There was no escape until they reached the basement and dashed for the window.

NATO Does Not Lose One Inch to Red Offensive

By JOSEPH E. DYNAN

PARIS (AP) — Under a low sky on a March afternoon in 1947, Ernest Bevin, foreign secretary of Britain, and Georges Bidault, foreign minister of France, walked through the desolate ruins of Dunkerque to the half-demolished city hall and signed a 50-year mutual defense treaty.

A week later, President Harry S. Truman, acutely aware of a Communist threat to Greece and Turkey, told Congress that the United States should "support free peoples who are resisting attempted subjugation by armed minorities or by outside pressure."

The bluff and hearty Bevin is dead, and Bidault is a fugitive exile in Brazil. Truman, still jaunty and peppery as he nears his 80th birthday, is remembered for the "Truman Doctrine" which helped save Athens and Ankara from Communist rule.

These two events and these actors played the initial scene in a drama which eventually unfolded into history's most powerful peacetime defensive alliance, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Since Nato's inception 15 years ago, not a single square inch of the area it covers has been lost to communism.

Other events and other actors—some of them in an unwitting role—came to the stage before NATO could flourish and grow into today's massive shield and dread arsenal of nuclear power. The treaty of Dunkerque was written with a resurgent Germany in mind, and the Truman doctrine was a pragmatic reaction to a specific situation rather than a blueprint for Western survival.

The Kremlin has played one of the key roles, whether in the person of the cunningly cruel Josef Stalin or the craftily jovial Nikita Khrushchev. Stalin's grasp for power, with the Berlin blockade or the attack in Korea, sparked NATO's early development, just as Khrushchev's calculated coexistence has favored the emergence of Charles de Gaulle's lone wolf approach to Western defense.

Then, too, there were the tragic figures of Edouard Benes and Jan Masaryk of Czechoslovakia, the portly but sprightly Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg and his horn-rimmed glasses, and his drawling colleague from Texas, the white-maned Tom Connally, the brilliantly perceptive George C. Marshall, and the genial war hero, Dwight D. Eisenhower, who helped plan NATO's defense as general and NATO's policies as president.

Others on the scene have included the Lincolnesque Robert Schuman, who succeeded Bidault at the Quai D'Orsay, Winston Churchill and Belgium's Paul-Henri Spaak, each a master of eloquence in his own tongue, the youthful Air Force genius, Gen. Lauris Norstad, and the even younger John F. Kennedy, who blithely called himself "the man who escorted Jackie Kennedy to Paris."

Now the scene includes the tall and brooding figure of De Gaulle with his mystic belief in France's destiny and his sensitive insistence on French independence.

De Gaulle and his followers helped torpedo one design for West Germany's role in Western defense, and they have continually pressed for a louder French voice in NATO councils. De Gaulle withdrew much of France's contribution to the integrated command structure, and there are hints he may soon demand a revision of the treaty itself.

Moscow's violent opposition was the shadow of coming events. One after another, the governments of Eastern Europe were subverted and seized by the Communists, until finally the widely respected Benes reestablished at victory in his prewar post as president of Czechoslovakia, was forced to accept a Communist premier on Feb. 25, 1948.

Two weeks later, Czech Foreign Minister Jan Masaryk, the very symbol of his country's Western affinities, plunged—or was pushed—to his death from a window of the ministry in Prague, and Communist control was complete in that strategic bastion of central Europe.

New York State, with 41 congressmen, still has the largest representation in the House of Representatives followed by California with 38 and Pennsylvania with 27.

GOVERNOR MAY ATTEND

PUEBLO (UPI)— Colorado Gov. John Love is expected to be one of the primary officials at Colorado State Hospital's annual Career Day this Saturday. Both Love and Institutions Director David Hamil are expected to attend. The Colorado Association for Mental Health, sponsors of the program, estimated about 400 Denver-area high school students would attend.

Cigarette Smugglers Hunted in Mountains

GRAND ST. BERNARD, Switzerland (AP)—Ski fields of the new St. Bernard center which reaches into Italy, have run into an unexpected hazard: cigarette smugglers. The ski areas are being crisscrossed by jeeps and other vehicles laden with cigarettes being smuggled into Italy duty free. The vehicles' chains plow up the runs at certain points, and tourists have become increasingly irritated at the scale of this local "industry."

Until this season the smugglers shared the mountainside only with the Grand St. Bernard monks and their dogs, and carried on their "industry" openly, expecting to net about 150 francs ($17) each for their work daily.

Trumpeter swans were apparently named by some of the West's first settlers after their deep throated honking sound which can be heard for two miles.

Academy Men Work on Buddy Care Course

Bumps, bruises, strains, fractures, and other assorted injuries are flying thick and fast at the Air Force Academy — and all without a single complaint from the "patients."

Sixteen Academy airmen are enrolled in a special self aid and buddy care course sponsored by the 7625th USAF Hospital. Graduation exercises for the students are schedueld April 27.

Hospital instructors are briefing the men on first aid and medical training: shock and mouth-to-mouth artificial respiration; fractures, dislocations and sprains; wounds and hemorrhage, burns, heat, and cold injuries; communicable disease and military sanitation, health and physical fitness, poisons, bites, and stings; and transportation of the sick and injured.

A very unusual "lady" will play an important part in the artificial respiration demonstrations. Each man will practice techniques of mouth-tomouth resuscitation and external cardiac massage with "Resusci-Ann," a life-like mannikin.

Capt. George E. Farrell is project officer, SM. Sgt. William Steinmuller, NCOIC. Instructors include: T. Sgt. Frank Krupa, S. Sgt. Howard Jelle, S. Sgt. Joseph Proiette, Airman 1. C. Defeat of Reds Essential, Say SEATO Members

By DON HUTH

MANILA (AP) — The Southeast Asia Treaty Organization expressed "grave concern" today about continuing Communist aggression in South Viet Nam and agreed that members of the eight-nation alliance "should remain prepared if necessary to take further concrete steps" under the SEATO treaty.

The SEATO ministers agreed that the defeat of the Communist campaign "is essential not only to the security of the Republic of Viet Nam but to that of Southeast Asia.

"It will also be convincing proof that Communist expansion by such tactics will not be permitted."

France, which has proposed neutralization of Viet Nam and recognized Communist China, said that "under the present serious circumstances it was wise to abstain from any declaration."

The ministers set forth their views in a communique summing up their three-day 10th anniversary meeting.

They agreed that SEATO has had, and continues to have "a most important stabilizing influence in Southeast Asia."

The communique said the SEATO countries — the United States, Britain, France, Australia, New Zealand, Pakistan, Thailand and the Philippines — have continued over the past year "to enjoy peaceful progress and national security."

It added, however, that the communist threat remains.

"Despite the sharpening of the Sino-Soviet dispute," the communique said, "world domination remains the aim of communism and thus vigilance must not be relaxed."

The ministers reaffirmed that the determination of national policy rests with individual governments. But they also declared that material support and encouragement should be given to those nations which need and request such support in defending themselves.

McNamara, LeMay Battle About U.S. Arms Superiority

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara permitted use of intelligence estimates to challenge Gen. Curtis E. LeMay because he wanted to kill at birth any myth about declining U.S. military superiority.

This was learned from defense officials today as the gulf widened between the strong-willed defense secretary and the equally strong-minded Air Force chief of staff.

Late Monday the Pentagon issued a statement stressing "the increasing military superiority of the United States." It came after publication of LeMay's February congressional testimony contending the Russians are narrowing the gap.

One high official familiar with McNamara's thinking said the defense secretary feels it is "dangerous to raise any doubts about our strength."

"He thinks it would be wrong to sit by and allow creation of a myth—and it is a myth in his judgment—that there is any lessening of our strength," this official said.

The Defense Department statement did not name LeMay. Authorities would not acknowledge it was aimed at the controversial Air Force chief of staff, who feels McNamara is placing too much reliance on missiles and waving the manned bomber to the sidelines too early.

Officials noted that there had been a spate of criticisms, including a new defense strategy paper spelling out the views of one of McNamara's strongest foes, Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona.

But Goldwater's paper dwelt mostly on the issue of missile reliability—which plunged him into collision with McNamara early in Goldwater's quest for the Republican presidential nomination. The senator is an Air Force Reserve major general.

Instead, the Pentagon blast was aimed clearly at disputing questions raised "regarding the magnitude of our superiority and whether it is continuing to grow." LeMay's published testimony raised those questions.

Officials would neither confirm nor deny whether McNamara had initiated the statement, which was issued in the name of the Defense Department.

But they said it would not have come out "without the approval or knowledge of the secretary."

And this approval and knowledge would have applied to its contents—more specific intelligence information about relative U.S.-Soviet strengths than is normally allowed out by the Pentagon.

Asked why this data was being released now, a spokesman said, "These decisions are made in government from time to time."

To support its declaration that our superiority "has been increasing and we intend that it shall continue to increase," the Pentagon disclosed that:

—The United States has 540 strategic bombers constantly on alert and that the Soviets "could place over this country, on two-way missions," no more than 270 bombers, including 150 mediums that could hit only Alaska and the U.S. Northwest.

—The Air Force has about 750 Intercontinental ballistic missiles ready to launch while the Soviets have less than one-fourth that number in operation. That would be fewer than 187.

—"We have 192 Polaris missiles deployed; the Soviets have substantially fewer submarine-launched ballistic missiles in operation."

—U.S. Polaris submarines are all nuclear-powered; only a small percentage of Soviet missile subs are atomic-run. Polaris missiles can be fired from under water; the Soviet missiles can't. Each U.S. Polaris rocket has at least a 1,500-mile range; the Soviet missiles less than 500.

As for relative bomber strength since 1961, the Pentagon statement suggested this favors the United States—that the U.S. bomber force on combat alert has increased from less than 500 then while the Soviet bomber force has stayed about the same.

Both sides had only about "a handful of intercontinental ballistic missiles or submarine-launched missiles deployed" back in January 1961. The Pentagon said.

The implication here was that both sides started at about the same place three years ago and that the United States has vaulted ahead, not slowed down.

Brazilians Will Inaugurate New President

By ROBERT BERRELLEZ

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — A new chapter, possibly one of the most significant in Brazil's recent political history, opens today with the inauguration of Gen. Humberto Castello Branco as president.

How strong a hand the military will take in running the country and the prospects for political peace should be determined during the 21 months the 64-year-old former army chief of staff heads the interim government.

The military leaders of the anti-Communist coup that overthrew President Joao Goulart have promised elections for a new president in October 1965, when Goulart's successor would have been chosen.

There was a marked lack of interest in non-official circles as authorities completed preparations for the inauguration.

No flags or banners flew in Brasilia's business district. Residents of the capital seemed to go about their tasks totally indifferent to the event.

Basically Castello Branco's regime is intended to provide a transition from military back to civilian control. But his decisions could chart the course of the ailing nation.

The extent of military influence is expected to become apparent early. The composition of Castello Branco's cabinet also should determine the degree of ultra-conservative sentiment in the government.

All this will undoubtedly determine the reaction of the sizable segment of the population most seriously affected by the recent coup. This is made up of voters who gave big electoral majorities to Goulart and his Labor party.

Left-wing extremists infiltrated this powerful force. But it also sought dramatic reforms in an attempt to bring Brazil out of its social and economic stagnation.

The military recently deprived this group of most of its leaders by suspending their political rights.

New leaders presumably will arise. The next 21 months should tell whether they will survive, or whether the armed forces will follow Argentina's example of dealing forcefully, but inconclusively, with followers of former dictator Juan D. Peron.

Castello Branco faces a need for drastic measures to halt whirlwind inflation that has brought Brazil to the brink of economic ruin.

Interim President Paschoal Ranieri Mazzilli, the Chamber of Deputies president who succeeded Goulart, warned in a broadcast Tuesday night that Brazil's deficit for 1964 will total 1.5 trillion cruzeiros—$833.3 million at the current exchange rate.

Mazzilli said efforts for recovery would be futile without cuts in public payrolls and public spending.

Aid Was Not Offered To Castro, U.S. Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States tried during 1959 and early 1960 to open talks with Cuba's Castro regime on "outstanding differences" but did not offer aid, a State Department spokesman says.

The spokesman, press officer Robert J. McCloskey, answered questions Monday about an article by Theodore Draper in the magazine New Leader, that said the United States tried to offer assistance to Prime Minister Fidel Castro but that he turned to Moscow instead.

"In these exploratory exchanges in 1960 — which were public—the question of U.S. aid did not arise," McCloskey said.

Draper, a writer and research expert on Cuban affairs who has made studies for Harvard and Columbia universities, said Castro seemed interested at first in an offer of U.S. aid but changed his mind and entered into negotiations with Soviet Deputy Premier Anastas I. Mikoyan.

Another Underground Atom Test Is Staged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Atomic Energy Commission announced today another low-yield underground nuclear test at its Nevada test site, the second in two days.

Low yield means an explosive force equivalent to that of 20,000 tons of TNT or less.

This was the fifth weapons-related test announced in 1964. It is the 108th test blast at the Nevada station since Sept. 15, 1961.

SELLERS STILL SERIOUS

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — British actor Peter Sellers, recuperating from a heart seizure, is still listed as in serious condition and will be confined to bed for an undetermined time. He has shown a slow, steady improvement after the coronary thrombosis attack in which his heart stopped beating eight times. Doctors expect his recuperation to take several months.

Boyhood Burro Replaced at Last

PATCHOGUE, N.Y. (AP) — A 73-year-old man, James Nelson, whose father refused to let him keep a pet burro he bought for a shilling in Ireland more than 60 years ago, recently got a present from his daughter, Mrs. Charles Kemp: a burro purchased for $51 at a livestock auction conducted by the New York City Department of Purchases.

Mrs. Kemp said she had heard her father lament his lost burro for years and thought that if she got him one he might give up his job as a ship caulker and stay home to take care of the burro.

Nelson was delighted with his new pet, but refused to consider retiring since he insists he is "as strong as an ox, or, at least, as a burro!"

An official of the Lorton Reformatory of the District of Columbia, which recently sold its bloodhounds, said it was not uncommon for dogs to follow a scent to a multi-lane highway and then sit around, confused.

CABLE

YOKOHAMA, Japan (AP) — The U.S. cable ship Long Lines arrived today to start laying a submarine cable linking Japan and the South Pacific island of Guam.

The work is a part of an $80-million project linking Japan and the United States. It is being jointly undertaken by Japan's International Telegraph & Telephone Co. and the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

The 5,950-mile cable will pass through Midway, Wake and the Hawaiian islands.

The project is scheduled to be completed in time to open transpacific service around June 20.

Draft Law Probe May Star Boxer Cassius Clay

By STANLEY MEISLER

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressman predicts the House will soon launch a major investigation of the draft law and feature heavyweight champion Cassius Clay as its star witness.

The prediction came from Rep. William G. Bray, R-Ind., who told a newsman:

"I think the Selective Service made a mistake in rejecting Cassius Clay. Im not sure what the devil you could do with him. But I think the Army could have found a place for him."

The Army had said Clay was rejected after he failed to pass mental tests.

Bray, who is the ranking Republican member of the House Armed Services subcommittee on personnel, said he was not sure just which congressmen would do the investigating.

He said he was hoping to persuade his subcommittee to do it. He said there also was a possibility that a joint committee, made up of members of the Armed Services and Education and Labor committees, would do the job.

In any case, Bray said, he was confident that some subcommittee or committee would open an investigation soon and call Clay as a witness.

There was no official confirmation, however, of any committee plans. Rep. F. Edward Hebert, D-La., chairman of Bray's subcommittee, said "I don't know anything about it."

Bray said there had been much discussion among members of Congress for some time about what they consider the failings of the draft system.

"I'm not blaming Selective Service Director Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey about this," Bray said. "I'm not blaming Cassius Clay. But it does not seem right to reject a heavyweight boxing champion."

Rep. Thomas B. Curtis, R-Mo., recently told the House that "the draft law has been perverted from a system of satisfying the emergency manpower needs of the military in wartime into an inefficient, wasteful program of universal military training in peacetime."

Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, R-N.Y., and several other senators both Democratic and Republican, have proposed a presidential commission to study the draft.

New Compromise Being Sought in Civil Rights Issue

By JOHN CHADWICK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The behind-the-scenes search for a first-step compromise went forward today as the Senate's wordy floor battle over the House-passed civil rights bill moved into its 31st day.

Although President Johnson has called on the Senate to pass the bill without change, Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois said flatly there would be amendments.

But Dirksen, trying to thread his way through sharp differences among his GOP colleagues, was much less definite about what the changes would be.

Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., leader of the Dixie forces, refused comment on the amendments Dirksen is working on. "We haven't seen them yet," he told reporters.

A similar wait-and-see position has been taken by assistant Democratic Leader Hubert H. Humphrey, floor manager of the bill. He has made clear he will oppose weakening any essential features of the legislation.

Russell said he will offer an amendment providing that the bill, if it is passed, will not become effective unless it is approved by majority vote in a national referendum.

"The people ought to be heard before we change our form of government," he said.

The Senate stayed in session Monday from 10 a.m. until 10:44 p.m. Sen. Strom Thurmond, D-S.C., held the floor for 6 hours and 54 minutes, the longest yet, although this included an hour and 37 minutes he yielded to let colleagues speak on other subjects.

Thurmond argued that the Constitution's Bill of Rights and later amendments "is the best of all civil rights measures and none other is needed."

Dirksen has concentrated his compromise efforts so far on the section of the bill prohibiting discrimination in hiring, promoting or firing workers on account of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin. It would apply to employers, labor unions, and employment agencies.

CAN GOITER BE REDUCED

Goiter means ordinary enlargement of the thyroid gland. Metabolism seldom is disturbed. For most victims the swelling in the neck is difficult to hide, and therefore is a cosmetic defect. On the other hand, these are close quarters and complications occur when the enlarged gland presses upon neighboring neck structures. This explains why some goiter patients complain of hoarseness, cough, shortness of breath, or difficulty in swallowing.

Occasionally the structure goes berserk and steps up body metabolism. This possibility is suggested when the person develops tremor, nervousness, and weight loss despite an increasing appetite. Removal of the gland is strongly recommended if these complications arise. Surgery may be needed when a nodule is present.

Simple goiter is caused by an iodine deficiency. This condition is less prevalent since the widespread use of iodized salt, as well as the modern distribution of food products from various parts of the country. Heredity plays a role and so does the use of foods containing goiter-producing compounds.

Surgery corrects the defect but the individual must take thyroid extract thereafter to make up for the loss of the gland. Iodine may reduce the size of the organ, provided it is prescribed as soon as the swelling is noted. It is of little value after the goiter has been present for years.

The continuous use of thyroid extract may be useful in decreasing the size of the goiter when the condition has existed for some time. Dr. Bennett W. Billow of New York City recently reported gradual shrinkage of the gland in 124 out of 188 patients who took thyroid extract daily for a long time. Most of the failures had used the drug for only a short period. We can expect to hear more about the success of this remedy in years to come.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self - addressed envelope accompanies request.

Herpes Zoster

Mrs. K.M. Writes: Please write about the causes and effects of shingles on people of all ages.

Reply

This painful condition results from invasion of the nerve endings in the skin by a virus. Small blisters develop over the involved area. After they rupture, a crust forms. The disease lasts from three to six weeks and complete healing is the rule altho some elderly persons are left with a residual neuritis that lasts for many months. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on shingles.

Typhoid Immunity

V.C. writes: Does one attack of typhoid fever give complete or partial immunity to this disease?

Reply

Second attacks have been reported but usually lifelong immunity follows.

Not Used to Capacity

R. L. writes: Does a stooped posture encourage poor ventilation of the chest?

Reply

Yes, because faulty posture crowds the lungs and they do not expand fully. This reduces the air capacity.

Tied Tubes

Mrs. W. Writes: I had my tubes tied after my eighth child was born. Will I be able to have them untied so I can have more children?

Reply

This is difficult to do and rarely is successful.

THE CASUAL WAY

SUPERIOR, Neb. (AP) — When Joe A. Shaffer of Guide Rock took his car into a Superior garage for repairs, he was offered the use of another while his was in the shop.

Shaffer followed instructions to "take that Buick across the street."

The sheriff found Shaffer a week later to tell him there must have been two Buicks parked across from the garage because the one he was driving belonged to Mr. and Mrs. Hallie Beck of Superior.

Wallace Will Be Warded Off In Maryland

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP)—Sen. Daniel B. Brewster announced today he will be helped by an administration task force of speakers in his campaign to ward off Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama in Maryland's Democratic presidential primary May 19.

The Maryland senator, standing in for President Johnson in the primary, expressed concern over finding apparent strong support for Wallace's segregation views.

Brewster said that he has been cursed, booed and spit at by people at Democratic rallies in his native Baltimore County and neighboring Baltimore City.

There's a heavy undercurrent from which Wallace is going to draw considerable support, and it cannot be ignored, Brewster said.

He said that Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., and "a substantial number of other friends" will join him in speaking appearances.

"One or more of my friends will accompany me to a meeting each night," and with me give the party call for responsibility, Brewster said.

Wallace said he would come to Maryland to stay a day or two after the May 5 primary in Indiana in which he also is a candidate.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, M.D., Ph.D.

Tommy is rapidly becoming a firebug. So be sure you read the dual explanation below. It is normal for youngsters to want to light matches. But many of them have an abnormal yen to do so, based on repressed sexual urges. So send for the sex booklet below and safeguard your child against such sexual errors.

By George W. Crane,
Ph. D., M. D.

* * *

CASE S-440: Tommy Z., aged 10, has a common obsession.

"Dr. Crane," his mother began, "what can we do for Tommy?

"For he has a mania to get at matches and start fires. Last week when he was playing next door at the home of a little girl his own age, he started a fire that burned the floor out of the back porch.

"If the fire truck hadn't arrived so swiftly, the whole house might have burned down.

"His daddy has punished him several times for playing with matches, but Tommy just can't seem to leave them alone.

"He seems as fascinated by matches as the chronic alcoholic is attracted to liquor."

FIREBUG PSYCHOLOGY

There are two basic aspects to this mania for matches.

Up to a certain degree, it is a natural form of childhood curiosity.

So try to let your youngster indulge their yen to strike matches.

For example, deliberately schedule some picnics where you will have a bonfire.

But let your child actually scratch the match and light the fire.

Meanwhile, warn him to be careful lest he burn himself. And as soon as he is old enough, let him join the Cub Scouts and then the Boy Scouts.

For in those splendid organizations he will be taught the wise use of matches.

But even when he is too young to be a Cub Scout, be sure you drill him on the dangers of fires, plus how to safeguard himself and the community by making sure campfires are all extinguished before the picnic party leaves the scene.

If you let a child start fires in the legitimate course of events, as at picnics or when you want a fire in your home fireplace, he will get this craving out of his system.

Many adults forget to let the child actually ignite the match, so the youngster often builds up an abnormal craving to strike matches.

It thus becomes a "status symbol," much like the similar craving to smoke cigarets, just because he thinks such an act will signify he is BIG or adultish.

But many firebugs or arsonists set fires for another reason.

For sexual excitement is somewhat similar to the thrilling danger associated with raging fires.

Fire-setting thus is often an indirect outlet for repressed sexual urges.

And that was true of Tommy, for he had been sexually interested in this neighbor girl. She excited him.

In the resulting mood of exhilaration and tingling physical energy, he felt an overpowering urge to do something dangerous.

So he built a fire next to the porch, which soon ignited.

In our prudish past generations, we have refused to analyze these simple sexual reactions of children, feeling that they never have any sexual thoughts in their heads till the late teens.

But psychiatry knows better. And it was partly an indictment of the adult older generation when youngsters went wrong.

So send for my booklet "Sex Education for 2 to 20 Years," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 20 cents.

Use it to safeguard your child from abnormal sexual outlets.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 20 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

Kansas City Cop Is Freed on Parole

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI)—Former city policeman Randolph Keith Burton, 27, who pleaded guilty to stealing and second-degree burglary charges, today was free on parole from a five-year sentence.

Burton was granted the parole Tuesday after sentencing in Jackson County circuit court.

He pleaded guilty to the charges Feb. 27 in connection with an alleged burglary ring of policemen operating out of the Country Club station.

Burton had testified before a grand jury and at the trials of two other policemen accused in the burglary ring. Both were acquitted.

A total of five policemen and two civilians were charged in the robberies. A former patrolmen and two civilians pleaded guilty and are currently awaiting sentencing. Charges against another policeman were dropped.

Americans Are Worriers, Conference Told

BOULDER (AP) — The 17th annual Conference on World Affairs was told today that many Americans worry too much about what others think of us.

Taken as a whole, Sanford S. Marlowe said, the United States is seen in a relatively favorable light.

"But the picture is not all rosy," added Marlowe, director of the U.S. Information Agency's office of private operation, in a speech at the University of Colorado sponsored conference.

"We are roundly condemned for our race relations. There is a widespread misunderstanding of our economic system. There are many who profess to think of us as people without culture, who constantly subordinate the finer things of life to material values and mechanical gadgets."

The veteran USIA officers said many views of America result from the "many different images of ourselves which are projected from our country every day.

"To confuse this already fuzzy image there is a picture painted by the communists — their worldwide deliberate, never ending efforts to sow suspicion, to interpret our every action in imperalistic terms, to make us appear to be what Karl Marx a hundred years ago said we were to become."

Marlowe said criticisms of America should "not be dismissed lightly nor taken as unimportant, but neither should one brood over them or become despondent."

Man Electrocuted At Grinding Machine

DENVER (AP) — Clarence L. McConnell, 81, of Lafayette was electrocuted Tuesday while on a grinding machine at the Sundstrand Corp., plant in Adams County.

Authorities said it has not been determined how McConnell came in contact with high voltage wires near the machine.

Stores claim theft or damaged shopping carts cost them $15 million a year.

Wasson's 'Space Age' Bats Boom In Victory Over North Denver

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

One day, shortly after the start of the current season, Wasson's Gib Funk gazed wistfully across the short expanse of outfield at the school's baseball diamond and announced glumly that not a single member of his 1964 squad had hit even a batting-practice-pitch over one of the neighborly fences surrounding the park.

Funk, who has never been noted for pre-season bursts of optimism, had ample reason to assume the role of mourner. His past two teams had belted balls out of the cozy Wasson park at the rate of nearly two dozen a season. "I will be surprised," Gib said that dark day, "if we hit one home run this year."

Keeping that in mind, it is safe to say that Wednesday afternoon the veteran Wasson coach was astounded. Six times, during an 11-2 battering of highly-regarded North Denver, balls sailed over the outfield barrier.

"Either Funk has transplanted his fences," mused one observer, "or these kids have discovered a space age bat."

The home run barrage was only a portion of the 17-hit attack that riddled three members of a pitching staff that has been termed the finest in the Denver League. Impatient following two straight games in which opposition pitching had whittled away at batting averages, the T-Birds welcomed the more-cooperative Viking trio like a favorite relative.

The astounding performance was even more incredible when considering that the chief cannoneer was 140-pound Jim Smith. The featherweight shortstop surpassed all tales of former Thunderbird feats of power by cracking round-trippers on three successive trips to the plate. Smith, whose wrist action would leave the average batter with a case of whiplash, sailed two balls out the park at such altitude that they may have shown up on Norad's radar screens.

Smith was only one of four Wasson hitters who finished the afternoon with three safeties. Mike Teague had a four-bagger to lead off the contest and added two singles later. Clay Chambers ripped a pair of singles and a double and catcher Hal Meller stroked two singles and a two-run homer. The other home run flew off the bat of Rich Porreco who had earlier entered the game as a pinch-hitter.

While all these offensive explosions were taking place right-hander Bob Torrie was turning back the Vikings with another excellent pitching performance. Torrie set down the Denver club for four frames before finally yielding a run. When North finally broke through it was the first tally off Wasson pitching in 23 innings.

The powerful Torrie, who appears to be mixing his pitches better with each appearance, yielded seven hits over the six innings he worked but issued no walks and fanned six. He was in trouble only in the fifth and sixth, after tiring and gave way to Bill Brandt in the final frame.

In addition to Smith's phenomenal hitting, the Thunderbirds received a brilliant performance from catcher Meller, who is certainly one of the most polished players in the area. Meller yanked his pitchers out of tough situations three times during the game by picking runners off base — twice at second.

Teague put the Thunderbirds in command immediately by hitting the fourth pitch over the left field fence in the bottom of the first inning. In the third Smith followed Meller's single with the first of his three blasts and the 'Birds broke it wide open in the fourth with five runs, including back-to-back homers by Meller and Smith. Smith picked up his third four-master to lead off the sixth and Porreco followed with his solo shot that ended the scoring.

The win ran Wasson's record to 9-1 for the season and gave the T-Birds a sweep of six non-conference games. The team resumes league play Saturday morning at Pueblo South with ace Bob Kochis scheduled to return to the mound.

Beattie to Lead Tribute to Werner

NEW YORK (UPI) — U.S. Olympic ski coach Bob Beattie will lead the tribute to Bud Werner, Olympic skier killed in an avalanche last Sunday, on the ABC-TV Wide World of Sports program, April 18. Beattie will explain how Werner helped the United States progress in a field where Europeans have been dominant for years.

'PICTURE SLIDE'—Air Force Academy right fielder Don Senn seems to be posing for the photographer as he slides across home plate in this fourth inning action of Wednesday afternoon's game with Denver University. Senn was tagged out by catcher Dick Brush after a throw from first baseman Dick Jaquez who fielded Darryl Bloodworth's line drive with the bases loaded. This was only the first out of the inning, however, and the Falcons went on to score nine times in the fourth frame in their 11-3 victory over the Pioneers. The win was AFA's eighth straight triumph of the season. (Gazette Telegraph Photo)

Falcons Bomb Denver For Eighth Straight

By LOY HOLMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Editor

After vainly trying for seven innings to get a hit off Pete Bracci, Denver University got literal with the expression and finally accomplished what had been impossible up to that time.

Through the first seven frames of Wednesday's contest at the Air Force Academy, the visiting Pioneers were put down in order by the Falcons' junior right hander from Haverhill, Mass. But a quirk of fate spoiled what might have been the first no-hitter among collegians of the region this season.

Facing the minimum of 21 batters up until the start of the eighth, Bracci got in the way of a line smash from the bat of Denver's Jim Zinck which ricocheted off his pitching hand and dribbled off the mound. He picked up the ball in time to make the play at first, but it left his hand throbbing through the AFA's half of the frame.

Apparently it was enough of an injury to take just a little off the slants he had been throwing past the Pioneers and the first one up in the eighth put a halt to his near perfect game. Dick Jaquez, DU's veteran first baseman, sent the first offering looping over the right fielder's head and it bounced over the fence for a double.

Later in the inning Denver continued the punishment to the body of Bracci with another liner striking him on the other arm and this was again followed by a pair of hits including a homer by Dick Brush that scored the second and third runs.

That was all Denver could manage and it wasn't enough to stop the Falcons from chalking up their eighth straight victory. Going into that ill-fated frame the Air Force was leading by an 11-0 margin and that was the way it ended in the ninth, 11-3.

Aside from the nine-run inning by the Falcons in the fourth, it was one of the better games expected to be seen in the area this spring. Seven of the AFA's 13 hits also came in the fourth, and otherwise it could easily have been a much closer contest.

Bracci was obviously the hero for the day with his masterful performance which frustrated the Pioneers at every turn except for the three-run eighth. He struck out 11 and was the eighth Air Force pitcher to go the route this season.

This weekend the Cadets continue the quest to be the region's outstanding club as they take on Colorado State University this Saturday in a 2 p.m. contest at Falcon Field. Last week they plastered the Aggies, 11-7, and will be favored to add their ninth in 10 games.

The AFA lost the season's opener at New Mexico, but otherwise have been unbeatable the rest of the way.

Bracci was backed up by another case of smashing support from the hitters, topped by three safeties apiece from third baseman Jim Steed and first baseman Bruce Huneke. Among the 13 hits were a home run with one on by catcher Al McArtor, a triple by sophomore John Ollita (pronounced Oh-La-La), and doubles from Huneke, outfielder Frank Packer and second baseman Blaine Brownlow.

Ollila made a spectacular debut as a Falcon starter in left field by driving in four of the runs with three coming in on his fourth inning triple and another RBI single his second time around in the same inning. This triple was the blow that set off the big inning and eventually chased DU starter Dick Watkins who absorbed this third loss without a win.

Shelly Jacobson came on in the relief but still had a hard time in silencing the Falcons in the fourth. But from that inning on, he threw up a one-hit shutout and Denver Coach Jack Rose today was bound to have some misgivings about not putting him on the hill in the first place.

McArtor's homer over the left field wall in the second with Huneke aboard on a single was the only other scoring by the AFA. But this has been their way to victory most of the season, going for the big inning that breaks up the game.

Jaquez' double that broke the no-hit spell was undoubtedly the biggest disappointment for Bracci, but it was Brush's homer in the same frame that brought out the tape measure. His blast cleared the 320-foot right wall by at least 100 feet and it kept rolling almost out of sight.

The only other runner Bracci allowed was in the fifth as it seemed he cooled down after sitting out the long nine-run onslought by his teammates just before. He temporarily lost his pin-point control and walked the first batter, but he was quickly erased on one of the two double plays featured in the errorless game.

Birds Swamp Pueblo Rivals In Triangular Track Meet

PUEBLO — A shorthanded Wasson team still had enough muscle to swamp Pueblo East and Pueblo South in a triangular track meet here Wednesday as senior Dominic Flacco won four events.

Coach Jim Hartman had left several athletes behind due to other school activities this week, including top point-maker, Mike Martin. Nevertheless, Wasson rolled up 75½ points to easily capture the meet. East finished with 45 and Pueblo South had 27½.

The Thunderbirds won nine of the 14 events and had excellent performances from several in the final tuneup before Saturday's Centennial Invitational in Pueblo. Flacco launched his afternoon's work with a 10.5 clocking in winning the 100 yard dash. Later he came back to win the low hurdles in 21.5, the 220 dash in 23.8, and the broad jump with a leap of 20-4½.

Hartman, continuing to experiment with his deep squad, pulled ace miler Jeff Berven out of the four lap event and ran him in the 440 yard dash. Berven easily won the event in the time of 53.1 and returned later to anchor the mile relay team to victory. Hartman said the switch was to keep the Thunderbird star from growing stale in the one event but indicated that Berven will be back at his usual distance Saturday.

Weight-man Bruce Teschner continued his steady improvement, winning the shot-put with a career high of 50-4½ and junior Randy Vance became the second Thunderbird to go 5-11 in the high jump this spring while winning that event. The other T-Bird first place was captured by Alan Britton in the 880 with a time of 2:06.6.

Pueblo College Scores Win Over Tigers, 4-3

By CHARLIE DREUX
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Perhaps the postman doesn't ring twice, but for Colorado College's Tigers opportunity knocked twice Tuesday during an afternoon baseball game against Southern Colorado State College at Memorial Park.

Despite 12 hits scattered throughout the nine inning encounter, the Tigers succumbed to their southern neighbors, 4-3, and Bob Johnson's CC aggregation failed to record its third consecutive victory of the young season.

For the winning Indians, it meant their sixth triumph against only one defeat. The Pueblo group only required six key-placed hits to register the win. However, the Indians called on four pitchers to clinch the decision.

The visiting baseball team struck in two successive frames as the Indians belted CC's starting chucker, Mike Irsfield, for a single tally in the fourth stanza and accumulated three addition runs in the fifth inning to put the game on ice.

Irsfield was charged with the loss and during his five innings on the mound the Tigers' right-hander was tabbed for five hits and two earned runs including a homer by the opposition's pitcher, Nick Crazzio. The Indian hurler parked a 375-foot four bagger over the left-center field fence in the fourth stanza.

However, the Tigers' catcher Roger Williams followed suit in the next inning. Williams was responsible for CC's third run when he blasted a 360-foot home run over the left-center field fence.

The Indians' left fielder, Dick Milam, accounted for the winning team's additional three runs. Milam peppered a triple through the infield and made it home because of an error on the Tigers' second sacker, Mike Mestik.

With the bases loaded in the seventh inning with two out, the Tigers blew their first opportunity to deadlock the contest. Reno Van Putten managed to make first base on a fielder's choice and Carl Clay put two on base via an error on the short stop.

John Simus drew a walk to load the bags, but clean-up batter Dennis Walker hit to first base and an unassisted third out. And thus, ended the scoring threat.

The second chance for CC to tie the score came in the final inning when pinch-hitter Tom Mahoney, batting for Van Putten, singled. Clay followed with a single but Mahoney was forced at third when John Simus attempted a sacrifice bunt which was fielded by the pitcher and forced Mahoney at third.

Clean-up batter, Dennis Walker, hit into a double play to end the scoring threat.

The Tigers' next outing is slated this Friday against Colorado School of Mines. That game is scheduled to be played in Golden beginning at 3 p.m. Then on Saturday, the Miners journey to Colorado Springs for another outing against CC at Memorial Park.

Academy High Bombs Manitou Springs, 14-3

By DICK FOSTER

Air Academy's Kadets bombed Manitou with 10 runs in the second inning, and coasted to a 14-3 Pikes Peak League victory over the Mustangs Wednesday. The Big Blue's big bats pounded three pitchers in the four-and-one-half inning affair which was called because of the loop's seven run margin ruling.

John Gannon, Academy's ace hurler had some early game trouble, walking the first man to face him and giving up a hit when the second batter singled. Gannon however, settled down to fan the next two and ground out the following batter to leave Manitou's two men straying on base.

It was little of the same luck for Manitou's starting hurler, Steve Kohl. Roger Karolick slapped Kohl's first pitch of the game for a double. He was followed by Lance Jensen who made first on an error. On the same error Karolick scored and Jensen advanced to second. John Gannon singled driving Jensen home and John Irvin sent Gannon across. Academy had a 3-0 lead after one inning of play.

The second inning looked like ring around the infield, as Kadet after Kadet blasted balls back at Mustang moundsmen. Kohl was tagged for four more hits and three runs before he was relieved with none out in the second. Rudy Hallenbeck started the bombardment with a single, followed by Karolick's homer. Jensen singled. John Gannon doubled.

Bob Basham was intentionally walked, loading the bases with none out. Irvin doubled sending Jensen and Gannon home, and Bill Culver followed that with another two bagger that scored Basham. Hallenbeck, who started the whole works, got to bat again, and singled driving Irvin in and Lance Jensen wrapped the whole works into a neat little package with a three run homer.

Academy's final run was in the third when Irvin doubled and got home on a wild pitch and a catching error.

Manitou was having bat trouble when facing Gannon. But when Lance Jensen relieved Gannon in the fifth inning the Mustangs seemed to realize that now or never moment was at hand. With this in mind, the Manitou nine set to work with a last effort to climb back into the ball game.

Three runs was all Manitou could muster. Bucky Ravenstein walked, went to second on a wild pitch and advanced to third on a catching error. Greg Smouse followed, also walking, and John Fletcher made first on a fielder's choice, as George Tyler was thrown out at second after his single drove Ravenstein home. Fletcher's hit sent Smouse home and Fletcher then scored on Dan Wheeler's double.

Academy's big bats whacked two Manitou pitchers off the mound. Kohl the starter and also the loser went only one inning, gave up six hits, six runs, walked two and fanned none. Smouse, his relief man went zero innings, gave up four hits and five runs. Only Greg Gilbert could tame the rampaging Kadets. He went three innings gave up three runs and three hits and fanned the same number as winning pitcher Gannon, which was six. Gannon pitched four shut out innings and gave up just two hits before being relieved by Jensen in the fifth.

Six-time PPL champion from Cheyenne Mountain launches its defense of the league championship when Eldon Helm's Tribesmen take on Manitou Springs Friday. That PPL game is slated for the Manitou home field while four-time runner-up in the league, Academy High, journeys across town for a league contest with Harrison the same day. Both games are set for 4 p.m.

In reviewing the past week's agenda, Florence leads the pack with two victories when the Huskies dumped Manitou, 10-7 last Saturday and two weeks ago scored an impressive 8-2 win over pesky Harrison.

After dropping a 5-2 decision to St. Mary's a week ago last Tuesday, the Cheyenne aggregation bounced back Saturday to pull out a 7-0 triumph over visiting Machebeuf. Then on Tuesday, the Tribe lost its annual bid to overthrow cross-town baseball rival, Wasson, 3-0.

Archery Competition Starts Two Week Run

The first of two Friday nights of competition for the City Championship of Colorado Springs in archery is scheduled for this weekend at the National Guard Armory. Both this week and next the shooting will begin at 7:30 p.m. with the Big Horn Bow Hunters acting as hosts.

Last weekend the Mile High Archery Club of Denver captured both the amateur and non-amateur four-man team titles at the state indoor tournament at the Golden Arrow Archery Lanes in Denver. The first competition consisted of a 30-yard Flint Round and the second session was a Duryee Round.

The Flint Round consists of shooting at a six-inch target with a three-inch bull's eye at distances varying from 20 feet to 15 yards, and at 12-inch target with a six-inch bull's-eye at distances from 20 yards to 30 yards. A bull's-eye is worth five points and a perfect score would be 560.

The Duryee Round consists of shooting 90 arrows at 30 yards at a 9 3-5 inch bull's-eye. A perfect hit on this target is worth nine points and the maximum score is 810.

The high individual shooters were both from the Mile High Club. Myron Peters captured first place honors in the open division by shooting 531 in the Flint Round and then coming back in the afternoon with an 808. Larry Fulton beat out all the amateurs by also posting a near-perfect 808 Duryee. Both archers scored 89 out of 90 arrows in the nine inch circle from 30 yards. Larry's score in the Flint was 528.

The Big Horn Bow Hunters of Colorado Springs entered teams in both the open and amateur divisions. The amateurs placed third over-all in the state while the open team could do no better than tie for fourth place. Scores of the individual members were:

Open team — 1. Chuck Wertz, 508 and 798; 2. Mike Steger, 505 and 786; 3. Jim Ward, 451 and 784; 4. Terry Rickard, 465 and 756.

Amateurs — 1. Dave Higby, 468 and 788; 2. Henry Holland, 454 and 776; 3. Tom Stanko, 411 and 714; 4. Jim Newell, 381 and 718.

The team scores of the top five clubs from throughout the state were as follows:

Giants Off and Running Behind Mays' Big Bat

By GEORGE C. LANGFORD
UPI Sports Writer

Watch wondrous Willie. He's playing for his $105,000.

Willie — Mays, of course — is the barometer for the San Francisco Giants and right now Willie is hot. So are the Giants.

Mays shouldered much of the blame for the Giants' failure to repeat as the National League champions last season. He remembers how he slugged 10 home runs in the first month of the Giants' championship year, in 1962, then slumped to a .232 batting average and only four homers in the first 30 days of the '63 season.

Willie's slump, along with his teammates', prompted Chub Feeney, the Giants vice president, to moan: "I've never seen so many guys play like they didn't care about money."

Well, Willie does. And he's out to prove he deserves his six - figure salary.

The Giants' centerfielder hammered his third home run in two days Wednesday night to ignite a 10 - run Giant spree which carried San Francisco to a 10-8 triumph over Milwaukee. Mays has driven in six runs, scored three and all of his hits have been for the circuit in the Giants first two victories.

Milwaukee, down 10-1 after four innings, threw a scare into the Giants with the aid of home runs from former teammate Ed Bailey and Eddie Mathews. Loser Bob Sadowski and rookie Larry Kelley were the victims of the 10 - run fourth, which included five walks and two wild pitches.

Former Brave Bob Shaw shut the door on a final Milwaukee rally in the ninth to protect the win for starter Jack Sanford.

Ken Boyer and Bob Gibson led the St. Louis Cardinals to a 6-2 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers; Philadelphia whipped the New York Mets, 4-1, and Pittsburgh outlasted the Chicago Cubs, 5-4 in 12 innings. Houston was idle and Cincinnati dropped a 4-3 verdict to its San Diego farm club of the Pacific Coast League in an exhibition game on the West Coast.

Bill Skowron's homer helped the Washington Senators to a 6-4 decision over the Los Angeles Angels in the only American League game. The Yankees' opener at New York with Boston was postoned for the second straight day because of rain and the other six teams were not scheduled.

Boyer's bases-loaded single in the eighth inning started a five-run Cardinal uprising against loser Don Drysdale in Los Angeles. Gibson, who went the route allowing nine hits, started the rally with a single. Rookie Johnny Lewis Curt Flood and Tim McCarver followed with run - producing singles. Frank Howard of the Dodgers slugged his second homer in two nights in the ninth.

The Phils sent the Mets down to their second straight defeat at Philadelphia with three unearned runs in the eighth. Tony Gonzalez accounted for all three with a home run after first baseman Tim Harkness had committed a two-out error. Jim Bunning, the ex-Detroit Tiger making his first start in the National League, was the winner and Tracy Stallard was the loser. Both went the distance.

Reliever Don Elston walked Bill Virdon with the bases loaded and two out in the 12th to hand the Pirates a victory at Pittsburgh. The walk followed two intentional passes after Bob Bailey, who had three hits, singled, was sacrificed to second and went to third on loser Elston's wild pitch.

Ernie Banks had provided the Cubs with a 4-1 lead going into the ninth on a three - run blast, but the Pirates tied it, primarily on pinchhitter Smokey Burgess' two - run single. The sixth Pittsburgh pitcher Roy Face, who lost the opener, won in relief.

Skowron's poke started a six-run Senator rally in the second inning at Washington. Winner Bennie Daniels, Don Blasingame and Chuck Hinton contributed run - scoring hits off loser Barry Latman. Jim Fregosi connected for the Angels.

Fountain Upends Cheyenne In Winning Cinder Meet

John Shultz's talented Trojans rose to the occasion Wednesday to score their first track meet victory over Pikes Peak League District champion, Cheyenne Mountain, as the Fountain tracksters edged the Tribesmen and Widefield in a triangular on their home oval.

The Fountain aggregation, spearheaded by speedster Bob Carter, accumulated 56 points to slip past Cheyenne by three-and-one-half points. Cheyenne finished second with 52½ points, while Widefield was third with 40½ points.

This was the first time the Trojans scored a decision over the Cheyenne team as the defending champions edged the Fountain squad on two previous occasions by a slight margin. The Indians won a four-way meet at the Fountain track earlier this season and topped Fountain by four points.

And Cheyenne won the Class A division of the Pikes Peak Relays slipping past Fountain by a mere two points. But Wednesday the Trojans came through to record their first win over the Indians.

The Trojans actually won the meet by scoring decisive wins in the pole vault and 880-yard run. Carter won both sprints as the Fountain speed merchant was clocked 10.3 in the 100-yard dash and 23.8 in the 220.

But the individual honors went to Cheyenne's jumping ace, Ron Graham. Graham leaped 21-4½ to win the broad jump and established the longest jump in the PPL to date. Graham also won the high jump (5-9½).

Center Moves Up at Nebraska

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The first individual promotions of the spring football camp were granted by Nebraska's coaching staff Wednesday, with center Steve Schaefer making the biggest jump.

A 6-2, 200-pound sophomore from Wintersville, Ohio, Schaefer was promoted from Henry Woods' No. 5 unit to the No. 2 team directed by Doug Tucker.

"Schaefer did a good job in Saturday's session and earned the big promotion," said Head Coach Bob Devaney.

Hawks, Warriors Set For Playoff Finals

By JACK STEVENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Gunning for the Western playoff championship of the National Basketball Association and the basket of cash going with it, the St. Louis Hawks battle the San Francisco Warriors tonight at the Cow Palace in the decider of their seven-game series.

Waiting in the wings to see who'll break the 3-3 tie are the Boston Celtics, the defending NBA champs who won the Eastern playoffs from the Cincinnati Royals a week ago.

The Celtics reportedly are incensed over the long wait.

"Nonsense," says General Manager Bob Feerick of the Warriors. "The rest gives them the advantages over either of us who must play tonight and then be in Boston to open the finals on Saturday night. And the Celtic know it."

Originally the final Western game was scheduled Tuesday but the San Francisco Seals had the Cow Palace reserved that night for a Western Hockey Association playoff game against Los Angeles.

As the Hawks and Warriors go into their deciding game before an anticipated crowd of 10,000, Wilt Chamberlain must be the big man no matter how you look at his 7-foot-1-inch height.

For if the Hawks can check his shooting, they'll probably win since the other Warriors haven't been consistent with outside shooting. In setting defenses, the visitors will have two or even three harrassing Wilt.

At stake in the cash department tonight is a purse of $12,500 for the winning team against $10,000 for the loser. That difference isn't so great but the winner goes into the final playoff where the purses will be $25,000 and $17,000. The loser tonight goes home.

Through six playoff games, Chamberlain leads the scoring with 215 points and has grabbed 143 rebounds.

Celtics Await Outcome

BOSTON (AP) — "Sorry you broke your leg, baby."

That macabre bit of humor from Tom Sanders of the Boston Celtics may sum up the roughness expected in tonight's final Western Division National Basketball Association championship game between St. Louis and the Warriors at San Francisco.

The Celtics, growing edgy from the long lay-off as they await the outcome, were commenting on the Hawks-Warriors series after a long workout Wednesday.

"That figures to be a tough seventh game," said Sanders. "You know, go up for a lay-up and three guys tackle you and say, 'Sorry baby, this is the last game of the season. Sorry you broke your leg, baby.'"

The playoff championship series opens at Boston Garden Saturday night, regardless of the Western Division outcome.

That means that Boston, which won its eighth straight Eastern Division playoff crown by ousting Cincinnati last Thursday night, will have been idle for nine days when the "money series" opens here.

"It'll be like getting in shape all over again," said Tommy Heinsohn.

"It means getting his players to a mental peak again," added Coach Red Auerbach. "And it's tough getting them up after beating the Royals in five games."

However, the Celtics were idle nearly two weeks between the end of the regular season and the opening of the Cincinnati series. And Boston had surprisingly little difficulty with the Royals in the best-of-seven semifinal playoffs.

AAU Swim Meet Opens In Pittsburgh

By ED SCHUYLER JR.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Divers and distance swimmers pooled their talents today at the opening of the Olympic-flavored Senior National AAU women's indoor swimming and diving championships at the University of Pittsburgh.

The diving event was the one-meter, with Patsy Willard of the Dick Smith Gym of Phoenix, Ariz., defending champion among those entered. Finals will be held tonight.

Also on tonight's card is the 1,650-yard freestyle, which is being held as part of the indoor championships for the first time this year. The winner will be determined by comparative times of heats.

About 250 of the nation's top female swimmers — the largest field ever entered—will compete in the four-day meet.

The girls have an added incentive this year—the Olympics. The first six finishers in each event will qualify for the U.S. Olympic team tryouts in New York in late summer.

Back to defend its team title is the powerful Santa Clara Calif. Swim Club, which includes six individual champions on its 15-member squad. Santa Clara also won both team relays in 1963.

Heading the Santa Clara team is 16-year-old Donna Devarona, a member of the 1960 Olympic team and the world record holder in the 400-meter individual medley. She will be defending her national titles in the 200-yard and 400-yard individual medley races.

Another top hopeful for the Olympics, Sharon Finneran, will be swimming for Santa Clara in this meet. Miss Finneran, the defending 500-yard freestyle titlist, was a member of the Los Angeles Athletic Club team last year.

Houston Classic First Round Set Today

By KENNETH CARR
United Press International

HOUSTON (UPI) — Touring golf pros looked to the often-windy fairways of Sharpstown Country Club today for the opening of the $50,000 next step on golf's 1964 tour — the Houston Classic.

Stocky Jack Nicklaus was a 3-1 favorite to win the $10,000 first prize over the par - 71 course. Lefthander Bob Charles, defending champion of the classic, was rated at 5-1 along with Dave Marr, Paul Harney, Dow Finsterwald and Bruce Devlin.

Golfers were shooting for another prize in the classic — qualification for the $200,000 Carling world golf championship scheduled for Oakland Hills Country Club in Detroit, Mich., Aug. 27-30. The sponsors designated the Houston classic one of 10 major U. S. tournaments as qualifying events for the Carling competition.

The Classic threw a new course at the touring pros this year. The Sharpstown layout is much newer than last year's Classic site, the Memorial Park course. At Sharpstown, brisk southwest winds frequently sweep the tabletop - flat ground and April is generally windy month for Houston.

The breezes could protect par for all but the best in this tournament. Sharpstown club pro Morgan Baker said if winds are brisk, "look for a 278, six under par (for the 72 holes) to take the marbles."

But if there are four calm days in a row — "a rarity for this course — the winning score could be 272."

Arnold Palmer, victor of the Masters tournament last week at Augusta, Ga., stayed away from the Houston Classic for the third year in a row. Gary Player was also missing, because of infected tonsils.

Red Wings, Leafs Set For Third NHL Game

DETROIT (AP)—If home ice makes the difference, the Detroit Red Wings might have an edge over the Toronto Maple Leafs tonight in the third game of the all-even Stanley Cup National Hockey League finals.

The Leafs, who lost the series' second game on their rink at Toronto, scheduled a workout at Olympia Stadium eight hours before face-off time.

Coach Punch Imlach, plainly disappointed with his team's performance Tuesday night, is keeping the defending champions skating in practice between games of the best-of-seven playoffs.

The Leafs surged to a 3-3 tie with Detroit in the third period Tuesday night, only to suffer a 4-3 setback in overtime. Detroit's Larry Jeffrey flicked the winning goal past Johnny Bower in the sudden-death period.

The Red Wings, betting underdogs when the series started, are resting between games. Coach Sid Abel took his squad to a race track Monday to keep the players relaxed.

Detroit defensive star Bill Gadsby agrees with Abel's strategy.

"That Punch Imlach is nuts," Gadsby said.

He added that veteran Toronto players like George Armstrong, Red Kelly and Allan Stanley "can't take it—this business of working out every day. It's killing them."

The Leafs and Wings will play game No. 4 here Saturday, then return to Toronto for the fifth game of the playoffs.

Miami Fan Collects Big Twin Double

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A 50-year-old Miami man invested $2 in a hunch bet on the twin double at Gulfstream Park and collected $63,721 Wednesday.

Vincent Palmisano, a former public relations man, took his winnings home in cash.

"With me opening a restaurant next week, this money sure came at an opportune time," he said.

He said he found the winning numbers on a piece of paper on the floor of the restaurant he plans to take over. He said he had no idea what the numbers—3, 7, 8, 1—represented but decided to get them.

The horses in Palmisano's selections were Swift Stream in the fifth race, $10.40; Brilliant Needle in the sixth, $5.80; Gallant Chief II in the eighth, $20.20, and Belfast in the ninth, $47.

Belfast figured in a $77,040 twin double on March 30. He won the ninth race on that date and paid $67.50.

The record twin double payoff is $84,114.20 here March 5. The $63,721 was fourth highest of the meeting.

'Rock Busters' Seeking Games This Summer

The Colorado State Penitentiary baseball team is looking for games to be scheduled with adult baseball teams from the Pikes Peak Region to fill out their summer slate. The "Rock Busters" have open dates in May, June, July and August and will play each Saturday and Sunday and holidays during the summer.

Anyone interested in scheduling games with this team is urged to contact Sgt. Clifford Mattax, Recreation Director at the Colorado State Penitentiary. Letters should be mailed to him in care of Box 1010, Canon City, Colo.

For obvious reasons, the Rock Busters will play all their games at home.

Hill Rise Preps for Derby

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP)—Hill Rise, a colt who has needed no help thus far, opens his Kentucky Derby campaign in earnest Friday in the Forerunner, a $10,000 allowance race which has mysteriously blessed many of its past participants.

The Forerunner is nothing unusual. The purse is $10,000 and the distance is seven furlongs. But this race seems to be a good-luck charm for those who use it for a Derby prep.

The Forerunner, which could end up a betless exhibition if the presence of Hill Rise scares off the competition, has produced seven of the past 15 Derby winners.

Bill Finnegan, who trains Hill Rise for El Peco Ranch, has indicated he will not race his colt again after the Forerunner until the Derby Trial April 28 at Churchill Downs.

Season's First Auto Racing Set for CDR This Weekend

Auto Racing fans can plan for the first competition of the 1964 season to get underway on Sunday, April 19, when belching highpowered engines of streamlined dragsters will take over the Continental Divide Raceways (C.D.R.). The first race of the year will bring together the area's top cars and drivers.

The 1964 season at C.D.R. may prove the most exciting yet at the famous multi-purpose track located one mile south of Castle Rock on U.S. Highway 85-87, only a short drive from Colorado Springs. Drag races, sports car road races, late model stock car races and several National Championship events will be held at C.D.R. during the season.

Highlights of the drag racing events will include the appearance of Tommy Ivo's Chrysler-powered dragster which has been timed at nearly 200 miles per hour in the quarter-mile run from a standing start. Ivo will bring his machine to C.D.R. on May 17 when the track hosts the N.H.R.A. Divisional Drag Races.

Other special events this year will include the High Altitude Drags on August 30, and for the first time in C.D.R. history three night-time Drag Races have been planned using the newly installed lighting system at the track. The 4th of July race will be at night and will feature a big fireworks show. All drag races will be sanctioned by the National Hot Rod Association (N.H.R.A.).

The road race season at C.D.R. will be one of the most active ever presented in the Rocky Mountain Area. Sports cars will have their Regionals on June 6 and 7, the Divisionals will be hosted on July 25 and 26, and an International Road Race will bring top drivers and cars from all over the globe to C.D.R. on August 15 and 16.

One of the largest championship track races to be seen in Colorado since National Championships' contests were held at Centennial at Littleton in the mid-50's will take place at C.D.R. on Sunday, June 28. The United States Automobile Club (U.S.A.C.) will sanction a 250-mile late model stock car National Championship Race on the 28th bringing top U.S.A.C. drivers and cars from all over the nation to the track including many of the drivers which will compete in the Indianapolis 500-Mile Race on May 30.

"This will be the greatest Auto Racing season yet at C.D.R.," said Nick Colbert the new general manager of the auto racing plant, "and we will have more announcements to make as the year progresses. The national television and radio coverage of drag races, road racing events and championship late model stock car competition and the assistance the sport has received from newspapers has increased the interest of all sports enthusiasts."

Werner Memorial Services To Take Place in Denver

DENVER (UPI)— Memorial services will be held in Denver at 5 p.m. today for Colorado skier Wallace (Buddy) Werner killed Sunday by an avalanche on the Swiss Alps.

Following the services, the body will be taken to the 29-year-old skier's hometown of Steamboat Springs, Colo., for burial Friday. It was in Steamboat Springs that Werner, twice a member of the U.S. Olympic ski team, first learned to ski.

The body of the skier arrived in Denver late Wednesday, accompanied by his Olympic coach and close friend, Bob Beattie. Several of Werner's Olympic teammates were at Denver's Stapleton Airport when the plane bearing the body arrived. They also will serve as pall-bearers.

Werner retired from a 12-year competitive skiing career less than a month ago. He and the German woman ski champion Barbi Henneberger were killed while making a movie near Zurich, Switzerland.

Friends of Werner at the University of Colorado have started a Buddy Werner Memorial Fund to finance a scholarship for a skier-scholar. Werner, who was a student at the University was to have graduated in June.

Budde Expected To Drop Assault Charges

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI)— Ed Budde, Kansas City Chiefs professional football lineman who was beaten at a local tavern March 5, is expected to drop charges against two men accused of assaulting him.

Budde, 23, said in a letter to Jackson County Prosecutor Lawrence F. Gepford Wednesday that "although I neither provoked nor started the fight ... for personal reasons I do not desire to prosecute."

Blades Storm Past Seals

By United Press Internatioaal

The Los Angeles Blades were still in the Western Hockey League playoffs Thursday, and they had their names in the league secord books besides.

The Blades scored a record five goals in 2 minutes 16 seconds of the third period Wednesday night at the Los Angeles Sports Arena during an 8-2 thumping of the San Francisco Seals.

But the Seals still lead the best-of-seven playoff for the Lester Patrick Cup, 3-2, and the sixth game will take place Friday on the Seals' home ice at the Cow Palace.

Mickey Mantle of the New York Yankees starts the 1964 season with a .309 lifetime batting average.

Oscar Awards Unique, Says Bob Thomas

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Academy aftermath—

It's still quite a show. For all the knocking and the ribbing it gets, the annual Oscar event remains a unique exhibit of glamor and professionalism.

The proceedings are formalized to a fault, and everyone gets weary of the parade of recipients with their effusion of thanks to all hands. But what would we do in their shoes?

The point is that the Academy Awards are a contest, a highly sophisticated competition. And Americans dearly love a race. That's why most of us sit through the dreary speeches and the limitless commercials to find out who is going to win the big prizes at the end.

That doesn't mean that Oscar can't be improved. As Debbie Reynolds pointed out before the event, the lack of participation of Hollywood's top names is shocking.

'Twas no always so. Five or 10 years ago, the majority of Hollywood's big names put on their best furs and feathers to make the Oscar bash the ultimate in glamor. Now they appear only if dragooned into service on the program.

Getting the stars to turn out is Oscar's No. 1 problem. Other matters, including the balloting, appear to be okay.

This year's results evoked as much satisfaction as any since 1955, when "Marty" came through with its Cinderella win. The crowd was pulling for Sidney Poitier, who won for the 14-day "Lilies of the Field" over much more costly entries. The fact that he is a Negro was not overlooked by the voters, but that does not detract from his highly engaging performance.

Patricia Neal, whose "Hud" role was scarcely more than supporting, scored another popular victory. Again, sympathy was not overlooked, since she has been plagued with personal tragedy. But she is also a consummate performer, too long underrated.

Melvyn Douglas won over the highly touted John Huston and Hugh Griffith and the heavy campaigns of Nick Adams and Bobby Darin. Adams spent $8,500 in trade paper ads before his nomination, though he made no effort to sway voters afterward. Darin's studio bought many ads for him, although the singer made no outlay himself.

The British beachhead at Santa Monica didn't materialize, although the voters were happy to reward "Tom Jones," Margaret Rutherford and Tony Richardson. It was a well-balanced ballot, and everyone, including some of the losers, seemed pleased with the whole thing.

Regent Faces Charge Of Drunken Driving

DENVER (AP) — A charge of driving an automobile while under the influence of alcohol was filed against Charles D. Bromley, Denver attorney and University of Colorado regent, in Municipal Court Tuesday.

Bond was set at $500.

Bromley was jailed for several hours Sunday after police said his car struck a parked automobile, a street sign, two trees, a hedge and a house.

The attorney said later he had blacked out and couldn't recall the accident. He has been free under a personal recognizance bond.

Chipita Park News

By CAROLYN McADAMS — MU 7-9065

An ESCAP (Emergency Service Civil Air Patrol) Squadron is being organized in the Ute Pass area to include Cascade, Chipita Park, Green Mountain Falls, Crystola, on out Highway 24 to Cripple Creek and also Highway 67 to Deckers. The Commanding Officer is Bill Osborn, Chipita Park, phone 684-9675. Capt. Osborn was with CAP Wing Information in Wyoming before moving to Ute Pass about 18 months ago. Needed to make up the squadron will be horses, motorcycles, four-wheel drive, pilots, communications and first aid. Training will be given the members in first aid and rescue, with operations through the El Paso and Teller County sheriffs' offices, as well as the CAP. Nine members have enrolled. All interested persons are invited to contact Mr. Osborn.

Don Young, State Forester from Canon City, presented an excellent analysis on the serious beetle infestation of the beautiful pine trees in Ute Pass. The recent dry weather and lack of watering privileges has caused greater concern than in previous years. A Beetle Control program has been recommended. It was very disappointing that more residents did not attend the meeting April 9, as letters had been sent to all property owners. Membership in the Chipita Park Home Owners Association has now passed the 100 mark, and it is hoped 100 per cent results will be reached by early summer.

Columbine Shrine No. 15, Order of White Shrine of Jerusalem, held its annual installation Saturday evening, April 11 at Manitou Springs Masonic Temple. Assisting was Mrs. Sara Pote, as installing chaplain. Earl Sever, Crystal Peak Estates, Highway 24, was installed Associate Watchman of Shepherds. Mrs. Helen Sever and Mrs. Wilma Cornett were installed Queen's Attendants. A total of 46 comprise the officers.

Some 250 persons were present April 11 at the Masonic Temple, Colorado Springs, for the semi-annual installation of officers, Bethel 23, International Order of Job's Daughters. Miss Ann McClintock, the new Honored Queen, was escorted through an arch of roses held by fourteen members of De Molay. Miss Candy Tillman was the Bible Escort during the ceremony. Among the appointive officers installed were: Eloise Bellinger, as third messenger, and Kathy Cornett, as official substitute. Appointed as director of Merit Awards is Mrs. Penny Tillman and Guardian Treasurer is Mrs. Wilma Cornett. Mrs. Mary Klipsch, director of music had a dinner rehearsal meeting, Friday evening, April 10, for the 20 members of the choir, at her home, 20 Downing Drive. Among the choir members are Candy Tillman, and Kathy Cornett.

A "Showers of Blessings" theme was the highlight of the April 10 meeting of Snowflake Chapter No. 153, Order of the Eastern Star, with Barbara Elwell, Worthy Matron, presiding. Mrs. Maude Crannier, chaplain, read the Sermon on the Mount followed by each one present naming a total of some fifty blessings we find in our lives. Some given were divine guidance, knowledge, fidelity, love, kindness, courtesy, security, sunshine, music and joy. Each blessing, printed on a narrow slip of paper, was placed on an umbrella, covered with organza and net, which was symbolic of showers. The hymn, "Showers of Blessings," was played during the program. Hostess for the social hour were Marilyn Wolfe and Edith Bonifield.

Mrs. Marlene Willie, a member of the Polka Dot, Sweet Adeline Quartet, is also the song arranger for programs, selecting those to be used. For the program given at the Manitou Springs Women's Club meeting in Memorial Hall Monday afternoon, April 6, the quartet sang "Give Me That Old Time Melody," "Old Piano Roll Blues," "Remember," "Alice Blue Gown," "Red Silk Stockings," "Glad Rag Doll," "Tootsie," and "When I Leave the World Behind."

Among the arrivals to occupy their mountain homes last week were Mr. and Mrs. Howard Searle, of Topeka, Kan., and Mrs. Daisy Mitchell from Lawrence, Kan. Mrs. Mitchell has completed a second story on her cottage, including a large upper living room, with picture windows viewing Highway 24, and the mountain range in the distance.

Scoutmaster Charles Stull, reports 21 Scouts in Troop 26 with several new Scouts coming in next week. A division of the troop into four patrols will be made at the regular meting Friday, April 17, at the Community Building, Green Mountain Falls, followed by election of leaders for the patrols.

Junior Girl Scouts Troop 347 had 13 present at Wednesday's meeting, with Mollie Lofland, Sherri Anderson, and Robyn Johnson conducting the flag ceremony. A member from each patrol was selected to serve on committees for the Mother's Day tea, May 6, which will be planned and managed entirely by the girls alone. Hostess committee is JoAnn Johnson, Ronda Mollett, Janet Ewart; Entertainment, Katie Baltzer, Mollie Lofland, Sherri Anderson; Refreshments, Cindy Ewart, Robin Foresyth, Kenny Gail Buchheister; Decorations, Julie Nixon, Bernice Howarth, Becky Weeks; Clean-up, Pamela Blosser, Terri Brooks. Leadrs of the JGS are Mrs. Jonell Ewart and Mrs. Shirle Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baught, of Security, joined the newly organized Senior Citizens Bowling League, playing at Ute Lanes Saturday, at 1:30 p.m. Wini Kraas, secretary, posted two unusual splits picked up when May Curtis recovered the 5-7-10 pins and "Pop" Oliver the 6-7-10. Several good scratch scores were made by George Miller hitting 543 in a three game series; Susie Denman, a 191 scratch game, with 219 handicap score; Dave Barton made 200 and Cecil Wright a 202, both scratch scores. The 12 teams call themselves the "Fun" league, as all about the same age enjoy even and smooth bowling.

Rex Speckman and Kenneth Lofland tied with a 541 score in the Crystola Inn team series making a total of 60 games won and 54 lost for the season. With three more weeks to play, the VFW League of 12 teams has First National Bank team in first place, with 84½ wins, 55½ lost. Ray Adamsheck hit a 500 series score last Wednesday night. On Friday night the Ute Classic Mixed Scratch league of 10 teams has KRDO still in second place, with 94 won, 34 lost and 62674. Garden Lane (4 place) won 78½, lost 49½, with 60796. B and B Tires won 70, lost 54, with 58580. Neal's Candies won 56, lost 72, with 59968. Townhouse Lounge won 50½, lost 77½, with 56595. American Electric won 50½, lost 77½, with 58255. The KRDO team of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Lofland, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Adamsheck really bowled their arms off hitting a three game scratch series of 2180. Gamewise the scores were 739, 739, 702. The series score was just one pin under the Iron Mikes Team, which holds high 2181 for the season. Alice Adamsheck scored 603 series, Barbara Lofland 544, Ray Adamsheck 541, Kenneth Lofland 496. Individual high game scores were given Alice Adamsheck 221, Jack Kobiema 213 and Marshall Ryan 212.

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Actor Peter Lorre's widow, petitioning to be named administrator of his estate, told Superior Court that he left no will when he died of a heart ailment last March 23.

Anne Marie Lorre, 37, estimated that the actor's estate would be increased by an annual income of $12,500. He also left about $10,000 in cash, according to the widow's petition Wednesday.

LAW DAY PLANS—Military and civilian legal experts discuss plans for Law Day U.S.A., which will be observed May 1. Mayor Harry Hoth pores through the law books searching out the legal basis for the annual observance as Col. T. R. Taggart, Mr. Kenneth Geddes, Mr. Jack Foutch, and Col. W. E. Mangerich look on. Hoth found that Law Day was instituted by President Eisenhower in 1958 and that present authorization comes from a Joint Resolution of Congress and the annual reaffirming of the proclamation by the President. The mutual community interest in this special observance will culminate in a Law Day Dinner April 30 at the Ent AFB Officers Open Mess. This will be one of the estimated 100,000 other similar programs scheduled all over our nation for the purpose of increasing the public understanding of the place of law in American life. Judge Moves Man From Farm To City Jail

Frank Rawls, 41, who has been living at the County Farm, won't be for the next 35 days. On Monday, acting judge Clinton Cole in Municipal Court gave Rawls a suspended $25 fine on a drunk charge.

In city court again on a drunk charge Wednesday, Rawls said he knew the judge had given him a break Monday, and although he said he didn't deserve another one, he nevertheless echoed his Monday request.

Judge Cole said he didn't think Rawls deserved a second break; he reinstated the $25 fine, and added the jail sentence, telling Rawls he thought he was making a career of getting drunk.

Rawls said he thought he was too.

Ed Kelleher, 54, 609 S. Weber Street, pleaded guilty to a drunk charge, but said this was the first time he'd been in the new jail, explaining he'd often been in the old jail on drunk charges.

Kelleher will have a chance to examine the new jail for the next three days.

Two Plead Guilty To Check Charges

Two defendants in Justice of the Peace H. C. McShane's court Wednesday pleaded guilty to short check and received suspended sentences.

The first was David W. Rhyne, 35, 101 Oklahoma Rd. Manitou Springs who admitted issuing a $16.48 short check Feb. 2 with intent to defraud Millers Super Markets.

The defendant was given 90 days suspended in county jail and ordered to pay $7 costs and make full restitution.

The second, Clarence E. Chamber 26, 3838 N. Nevada Ave. received 30 days suspended in jail for giving a $20 check March 1 to Millers Super Markets.

AFA Cadets Will Get Night Out The Hard Way

Twenty-five Air Force Academy cadets will get a "night out" the hard way this weekend.

Under the leadership of Cadet 2nd Clas P. R. Miller, members of the Cadet Mountain Rescue team will spend Saturday in the rugged Rampart range on a practice rescue mission.

Team members will brush up on land navigation, first aid, and search techniques during the exercise, and then spend the night in their sleeping bags.

Last November, the Academy team put practice to work when they took part in the search for a hunter lost in the rugged Vail Pass area west of Denver.

The group will be accompanied by Capt. E. L. Pyne and T. Sgt. G. D. Rush.

Cadets to Hear Project Mercury Flight Surgeon

Col. Douglas will discuss the physiological and medical results of Project Mercury.

The speech is sponsored by the Department of Physiology.

Col. Douglas is presently assigned to Patrick AFB, Fla., as a medical range officer.

He received his medical education in Texas and holds, in addition to his M.D., a Master's Degree in Public Health from Johns Hopkins.

The speaker also completed the Air Force advanced aviation medicine course.

Rescuers Rush To Save Miner In Idaho Shaft

By BURL OSBORNE

BURKE, Idaho (AP)—Rescuers worked through the night attempting to reach a 47-year-old miner trapped at the 7,000-foot level in the Star mine, Idaho's biggest and deepest zinc mine. One man died in the accident.

Crews were within 12 feet of Barney McCoy near dawn. He and Reed Peck, 41, Wallace, Idaho, were working in the deepest part of the mine when they were trapped by a "rockburst" which sent rocks and timbers into the shaft.

The body of Peck was recovered Wednesday night about five hours after the accident. He had been crushed to death by the debris which came down on him.

A mine official said rescuers had no indication whether McCoy was alive.

A mining expert says the "rockbursts" are small, local earthquakes. Peck was found in the debris choked tunnel.

The Hecla Mining Co., operates the Star mine with its 355 employes. A standby emergency-rescue team was dispatched to the mine after the word came that the men were trapped late Wednesday.

Gus Voltolini, employment manager at the Star, said rescue crews have dug to within six-feet of where McCoy was believed trapped.

McCoy could survive the cave-in if a broken timber held off the mud and rocks and left him an air pocket, Voltolini said.

Theft of Garden Hose Reported to Sheriff

Mrs. Ruth Wickersham, 306 Elm Circle, reported to the sheriff's office Wednesday that a green garden hose worth $25 had been stolen from the front of her house.

Broadmoor Police Officer Rudolf J. Weide said the theft happened sometime between Tuesday and Wednesday.

Criminal Charges Filed Against Two Defendants

Criminal charges were filed in District Court Wednesday against two defendants.

The first was Ruby Nell Kearcher also known as Nell Kearcher, 25, 14 N. 8th St., charged with no account check.

The defendant is alleged to have issued a $5 check drawn on the Exchange National Bank of Colorado Springs with intent to defraud the El Paso Garage, south of Colorado Springs, Feb. 26.

Judge William M. Calvert set bond at $500.

The second defendant, Truman Clinton Barrows, 20, of Peterson Field has been charged with burglary.

According to the information Barrows broke into the Daisy Launderette, 3125 W. Colorado Ave., April 2 with intent to commit larceny.

Judge Hunter D. Hardeman set bond at $2,000.

ABUNDANTLY SURPRISED

SALINA, Kan. (AP) — Mrs. Loren Soldan planned a family-type party for son Greg's 7th birthday but she planned without reckoning with Greg.

He trooped in from school with a passel of friends and announced to his mother that he had planned a surprise party for himself.

Mrs. Soldan frantically called mothers of the children and stalled the party for a few hours until she could lay in a supply of cake and ice cream.

ENVOY RECOVERING

TOKYO (UPI)—U. S. Ambassador Edwin O. Reischauer flew to Hawaii Wednesday to recover from a stab wound inflicted March 24 by a Japanese youth believed to be mentally unbalanced. Reischauer, 53, was smiling as he left Tokyo's Tiger Gate Hospital in a wheel chair.

School Signal Operation to Be Push-Button

The stop when flashing school light installation at Pikes Peak Avenue Avenue and 21st Street will be replaced with a push-button operated signal Thursday, weather permitting.

This light will affect students attending Sacred Heart School, according to City Traffic Engineer Don L. Smith.

Vehicular traffic will be stopped only when a pedestrian actuates the signal by pushing a button. The red lens will be 12 inches in size. As in similar installations, "walk" and "don't walk" pedestrian indications will be used.

This will be the eighth push button signal installed this year, Smith said, and seven more will be installed before the end of the current school year.

At the start of the current school year in September, the city had seven flashing speed reducer signals and 18 flashing stoppers.

"But now," Smith said, "one speed reducer has been removed along with nine flashing stop installations". The city traffic engineer also reported that eight additional locations in the city are to be restudied to determine whether existing installations will be replaced by the push-button variety or removed and not replaced at all.

Gas Dealers Attend Meet At Pueblo

A "Campaign for Customers" convention was held today for 150 service station dealer, dealer assistants and agents, hosted by the Standard Oil division of American Oil Company at the Continental Motel, Pueblo.

Customer courtesy, with particular attention to the 36 million women driver in the United States — 43 per cent of all drivers, and to service station appearance and cleanliness occupied the meeting.

The advertising program for the year and product advancements were discussed.

Appearing on the program with Prunty were: I. G. Ridge, district sales manager, Denver; H. A. McLean, manager sales training; R. L. Skrederstu, TBA merchandise manager, both of the Salt Lake regional office; and, M. J. Kennan, staff engineer, Denver.

PENNY BANKS COME BACK

NEW YORK (AP) — More people are learning that it's smart to be thrifty. This is the conclusion reported in Steelways official publication of American Iron and Steel Institute. Or to put it another way, penny banks are coming back strong.

New and old mechanical cast iron penny banks are enjoying a resurgence of interest, the magazine states. A well-known toy store in New York, F. A. O. Schwarz, reports a lively business in both new and antique penny banks. The store has a waiting list for certain models of the amusing thrift-inducing toys made from 1870 to the 1920s.

A bank which once retailed for $2 now brings $2,500.

Some Shipyards Should Be Closed, McNamara Says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara said in testimony published today that some of the Navy's 11 shipyards should be closed but it was "inconceivable" the number could go as high as six or seven.

"It is inconceivable, to me that we could close 6 or 7 out of the 11," McNamara told a House appropriations subcommittee.

McNamara and Navy Secretary Paul H. Nitze said a study of the shipyards would not be completed until late in the year, but they denied suggestions by Rep. Gerald R. Ford, R-Mich., that a report would deliberately be postponed until after the November election.

McNamara and Nitze, testifying on different days in February, said they intended to visit all the yards before reaching a final decision on which were to be closed.

Nitze denied a suggestion by Rep. Daniel J. Flood, D-Pa., that he and McNamara—who had visited only two of the yards—were looking only at the installations "that most probably will go."

McNamara told the committee he had visited the San Francisco and Mare Island yards in California.

MY ANSWER

by Billy Graham

© 1964 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Syndicate, Inc.

QUESTION: How can we be sure we are doing right all the time, if we sin without knowing it are we losing the chance to get to heaven? — J. O.

ANSWER: The Bible says "Man looketh upon the outward appearance, but God looketh upon the heart." Everyone should know that God is no less exacting than a loving parent. He hates sin because He knows what it will do to us, and therefore, He warns us against it. But, if we inadvertently commit a sin, we certainly do not lose our chances of going to heaven.

The Bible says to followers of Christ: "If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."

This doesn't mean that Christians go around deliberately sinning. If they live in constant sin, then it is an evidence that they are not truly Christian. What we are, we are by the grace of God. We are not saved because we are good, or lost because we are bad. We are saved because we accept Christ's ransom for our sins. He implants His new life within us, and our desire is to please Him. But if we stumble and fall, like a loving father, He forgives and pardons us, and gives us another chance. "If any man sin he has an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ."

Steps Against Glaucoma Are Sought

ATLANTA (AP) — Imagine an enclosed bathtub slowly filling with water. After water reaches the brim, pressure begins building inside the covered tub.

This is what the eye of a person stricken with glaucoma is like—a vessel with excess fluid and a serious inability to drain the liquid.

Scientists at Emory University believe they've found a way to reduce this pressure which causes glaucoma's characteristic hardening of the eyeballs.

Dr. Morton Waitzman, head of the eye research center in the department of ophthalmology, says, "We believe we've found a drug that will retard the chemical mechanisms in the eye which produce too much fluid."

The drug is oubain, usually taken internally for treatment of heart disease. Dr. Waitzman administered oubain into the eyes of rabbits and later measurements showed the eyes were softer.

Dr. Waitzman says that 5 to 10 per cent of the nation's population past 40 either suffers from glaucoma or has latent traces of the disease.

Waitzman says use of his discovery is pending follow-up on secondary harmful effects. Oubain injections will not eliminate glaucoma but will improve the arsenal of surgical and drug treatments, he says. Often patients become unresponsive to specific treatments. Dr. Waitzman says he is the first to report success after local oubain administration.

Another scientist at Emory, Dr. John F. R. Kuck Jr., is investigating the chemical changes in the lens of the eye that leads to cataracts. The breakdown of lens structure is due to an accumulation of abnormal sugar in the lens.

Treatment of cataracts is limited to surgery and the wearing of a thick lens afterwards. Dr. Kuck has already found that changes in diet can affect the lens composition in eyes of old animals. He is seeking a drug treatment for cataracts. The problem is most serious in elderly persons.

Hunting accidents in the South have caused another eye-problem of operating on hunters who have lead shot in their eyes.

Diabetic retinopathy, another eye disease which often strikes diabetics of 20-25 years suffering also is under study at Emory.

Waitzman believes the presence or absence of an unknown substance circulating in the blood causes retinopathy. He says that the eye disease will often appear before bodily diabetes occurs. He is trying to find the chemical or drug that can treat changes in the blood vessels that feed the retina.

CHANGES POST

LEADVILLE (UPI)— Dr. Joseph Webber, superintendent at Leadville public schools for the past 16 years, said Tuesday he was resigning to accept a similar post in Alamosa. The 55-year-old school official is a former Democratic national committeeman from Colorado. Under Webber's administration, there was $4.5 million in new schools and renovation work here.

POWER STRUGGLE

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CACUTTA, India (AP) — A power struggle appears under way in the little Himalayan kingdom of Bhutan, where Premier Jigme Dorji was assassinated April 5.

The arrest Monday of the deputy army commander, Gen. Chapda Namgyal Bahadur, in connection with Dorji's murder, was seen as part of a move by Bhutan's ruler, Maharaja Hwanchuk, to assert his authority.
